Brave Midnight Cabbie Gets $1,000 Surprise Fare

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

There'll be no more Saturday night specials for Joe Ng.

Ng is the slightly-built University of Victoria student who has a summer job driving a cab.

During his late-night shift last Saturday he fought off and disarmed a gun-wielding bandit and delivered him to the police station.

Today Ng was called out to the physics department at UVic (where he will be entering fourth year in the fall) to pick up an envelope that had been left for him.

Inside was $1,000 in cash.

A silver-haired lady in a straw hat left the envelope at UVic Wednesday to be given to Ng because, in her words, "he is a brave person and a decent human being."

"She wouldn't leave her name because she didn't want any publicity. She just wanted to reward Ng for his bravery, I guess," said Lorraine Charron, the secretary in the physics department who accepted the envelope.

Ng drives a cab Monday through Friday day shift, and to try and earn more money during the summer period works an extra late-night shift Saturdays.

That is, he used to. He won't be working the night shift anymore.

"I'm really pleased," he said today. "She (the donor) must be a decent citizen and a fine person."

Ng said he wants to send his gratitude to his mystery benefactor.

"She must be a person that likes law and order."

Ms. Charron said the woman was about 65 and looked "as if she had just stepped out of a rose garden."

Economic Outlook Brighter for '78

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Economic conditions in all the provinces will brighten considerably in 1978 from this year's below-potential performance, the latest survey of provincial economices released today by the Conference Board in Canada indicates.

In its first look at 1978, the board, a private, non-profit research group, including business, labor and government members, predicts "an accelerated pace of economic growth for all provinces."

But it adds the national outlook for 1977 is one of below potential growth and all provinces will feel some impact of this slowdown.

In British Columbia, economic conditions are expected to stay bright for the next two years.

Growth in the forest products industry in 1977 will provide B.C. with the largest increase in real output among the provinces this year at 4.7 per cent and expansion in 1978 will be about five per cent.

B.C. is the only province which will not see an increase in its jobless rate this year and in 1978 a further decline to 8.1 per cent is anticipated.

The board says real national growth rate in production of goods and services in 1978 will be five per cent.

Unemployment should drop next year to 7.7 per cent from this year's expected average of about eight per cent and the average labor force should climb over the 10-million mark.

But the board projects a dismal performance for the rest of 1977 nationally. The greatest weakness this year was expected in agriculture and fishing sectors. Construction will barely maintain last year's levels and important mining, manufacturing and service sectors will provide little impetus to growth, it says.

"What strength there is in 1977 comes from the forestry sector which will be spurred by the booming residential construction market in U.S." Other growth is expected in the transportation, communications and utilities sectors.

In 1978, strength is expected by the board in construction, transportation, communications and utilities sectors with supportive improvement in manufacturing and services.

Agricultural output will reverse its 1977 decline and a modest advance in mining and forestry is forecast to sustain its high levels of the previous two years.

Recovery in 1978 is expected to be most pronounced in the Atlantic region after two years of weak growth.

The Employers' Council of British Columbia, meanwhile, says business conditions in B.C. are improving slightly.

The council's prognosis is based on the results of a semi-annual survey, released Wednesday, that covered 175 firms employing 183,000 people.

Council president William Hamilton said the responses of those surveyed indicate the most optimistic outlook since economic slowdown in 1975.

"It is, though, still a far cry from the 45 per cent who found conditions good in the first half of 1974, the end of the last really good period," said Hamilton. "Cautious optimism best characterizes their position."

Hamilton said survey respondents were more positive about their own industry than business in general.

Nineteen per cent rated the first half of 1977 good in their own industry while only six per cent reported business in general to be good, he said.

He said 81 per cent expect the general business climate to be good or fair during the remainder of the year, compared with 72 per cent earlier in the year.

400,000 DIE IN RADIO JOKE

GENEVA (AP) — Swiss radio apologized today for broadcasting a satirical program featuring phony news bulletins about an East-West war in which neutron bombs were dropped and 480,000 people killed. The program prompted a rash of panicky telephone calls.

Wednesday night's program followed the regular evening newscast and blended pop music with light-veined commentaries on local topics. Interspersed through much of the 50-minute Radio Cabaret broadcast were realistic sounding news flashes.

The phony news bulletins reported heavy fighting along the border between East and West Germany, then said two neutron bombs were set off. Finally, there was a regretful announcement of the death toll: "480,000 people killed but no destruction and good luck for the survivors," an editor said. "The intention was to satirize the concept of the neutron bomb as a clean bomb. We thought it would be clear to everybody that these news flashes were fiction."

The Swiss radio incident recalled the 1938 War of the Worlds broadcast in the United States by Orson Welles about a fictitious invasion of New Jersey by Martian monsters. That broadcast started panic and a mass exodus by thousands of New York area residents.

DOGS BEST BUY

LONDON (UPI) — Dogs are not only man's best friend but also the best value for his money, according to the Consumer Association.

Britain's leading consumer organization polled its pet-owning members printed the results in the latest issue of its magazine.

Dogs were listed as the "best buys." Horses came second and cats were third, the magazine said after analyzing replies from 1,600 owners of 2,088 pets.

The magazine said the analysis took into account initial cost of the pet, upkeep costs and the time and trouble it takes to look after it.

Then it compared the amount of enjoyment each pet contributed to the household, the degree of owner satisfaction, and the animal's average life span.

MPs Debate Pipeline, Gov't O.K. Monday?

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament assemble today for a two-day debate on building a northern natural gas pipeline amid signs that the government will give the go-ahead as early as Monday to an Alaska-Yukon route.

The special mid-summer sitting of the Commons is the climax of years of public argument about delivery of Arctic fuel from Alaska and northern Canada to energy-hungry markets in the United States and southern Canada.

At stake is the biggest engineering enterprise in Canadian history, a $10-billion project reaching into the 1980s with crucial implications for Canada - U.S. relations, jobs and high finance, the future of the north and the northern environment.

Advice from four separate federal inquiries published in recent weeks tends to favor a pipeline route in the early 1980s from Alaska through the southern Yukon, rather than a line along the Mackenzie River in the neighboring Northwest Territories, with a possible link later to transport natural gas from the Mackenzie Delta to southern markets.

Deadline for decision is Sept. 1, when U.S. President Jimmy Carter is committed to make a firm recommendation to Congress. Alternative to an overland delivery route through Canada is a rival U.S. proposal to liquefy the gas in Alaska and deliver it to the U.S. West Coast by ship.

But Canadian government sources said Wednesday the cabinet plans to meet all weekend and make its decision Monday.

A Liberal caucus informant said that opposition support this week for an Alaska-Yukon pipeline, despite some qualifications, clinches expected approval for that route from the cabinet.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark announced Wednesday that his Progressive Conservative party caucus agrees with an Alaska-Yukon route. Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, announced his party's support earlier.

The special Commons debate, and the weekend cabinet discussion, thus promised to centre on matters of detail such as timing, finance, routes and conditions.

The government has promised that its final decision and attached conditions will be put to Parliament this fall for ratification as legislation.

The conditions will be important politically, because there are wide differences about details.

Criminal Injuries Hit Home

VANCOUVER (CP) — The most dangerous places in British Columbia during June apparently were private homes, if the criminal injuries awards for that month is any indication.

The Workers' Compensation Board granted 52 awards totalling $187,822 and two pensions totalling $490 a month for injuries resulting from criminal attacks.

Of the attacks, 10 were in the victim's home or a house where he was visiting.

A pension of $390 a month and $354 in a lump sum were awarded to the wife and two children of a 28-year-old man from a coastal community who was shot to death by another man for no apparent reason.

A supplementary pension of $100 and an addditional lump sum of $5,782 were given to a 19-year-old man who became a quadriplegic as a result of injuries. He had fallen down a stairwell when attacked by another man. The largest lump sum award in June — $20,260 — was given to a 58-year-old Vancouver man for permanent injuries to his left leg he received when he attempted to stop two youths he saw running away from a stolen car.

Gas Cloud

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A 500-foot high cloud of white gas covered part of the city today following an acid spill at the plant of Canadian Industries Ltd.

Homes near the plant were evacuated and motorists driving through the southern end of the city were forced to switch on headlights.

Heroin Plan Political—NDP

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke said Wednesday he doubts whether the provincial government's new multi-million dollar heroin treatment program will ever get off the ground.

Reacting to an announcement by Health Minister Bob McClelland earlier in the day, Cocke said: "I don't think it'll ever be tried out."

Cocke questioned the lack of specifics in McClelland's program and the fact that the start-up date is vague — being given as only sometime before Dec. 1978.

"It's a political announcement at this point," said Cocke. "There's nothing definite to it — it's a press conference and a press release, that's all."

Cocke said heroin addiction is "an agonizing problem and it isn't to be solved by political games."

Cocke also said that compulsory incarceration will not be a remedy to the problem, that such a program has never worked in other parts of the world and there is no reason it would work here.

The NDP proposed earlier this year that a heroin maintenance program be established to help combat the problem.

Dr. Scott Wallace, Progressive Conservative Party leader, said in an interview that he agreed in principle with the government proposal but has reservations about its operation.

Wallace said the program could be dangerous in application because "this government hasn't been outstanding in understanding problems of young people."

He said strong safeguards are needed to ensure the program won't be abused and that decisions made to hold someone for treatment are regularly reviewed.

Wallace said the matter raised questions of individual freedom and that it shouldn't be treated with anything but studied caution by the government.

Wallace to Test His Own Conduct in Court

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said Wednesday he will take himself to court to get a judgment on whether he illegally received public funds in 1976.

Wallace interrupted the afternoon sitting of the legislature to tell the house that last year the government paid him nearly $200 to cover expenses while a member of the steering committee of the B.C. Conference on the Family.

Wallace said the payments had just come to his attention and his lawyer, Hugh Ladner, of Kelowna, will start action within days to seek a declatory judgment from the B.C. Supreme Court.

Wallace could be found to be in breach of the Constitution Act which forbids any MLA from receiving public funds while performing a public duty.

The act provides for fines up to $500 and can force an MLA to relinquish his seat.

On July 11 Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) charged that Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt and George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) had illegally accepted public funds to cover their expenses while serving on a housing committee.

A special committee was struck last week to look into the charges but has been stalled by a threatened boycott of hearings by the opposition members.

The two NPD members, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Wallace have said they want no part of the proceedings because the outcome is weighted in the government's favor. There are seven Social Credit members on the 11-man committee.

Wallace said he is initiating the court action in his own case because he wants on objective judgment — free from allegations of political bias.

"Whatever decision is rendered I want it to be from outside the political arena," said Wallace at a news conference.

"I want a decision and I want it to be believable."

But whether the court will judge Wallace's case is a matter of conjecture.

The government opted to set up a committee to investigate the housing committee charges only after Attorney-General Garde Gardom told the house the issue—because of precedent and tradition — must be dealt with by the legislature.

Wallace told the legislature he is uncertain as to whether he ever actually committed any wrong-doing, but because

Store's Penalty $50,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has ordered a Winnipeg-based department store chain to pay $50,000 compensation for serious violations of the labor code.

In a decision released Wednesday, the board ordered the Robinson Little chain to compensate the Retail Clerks Union for all expenses incurred during the union's organizing drive at the chain's Kamloops branch.

The decision was the board's first use of the "make whole" clause of the provincial labor code.

The chain also was ordered to compensate eight workers who lost their jobs in the dispute and reimburse the attorney-general's department for legal costs arising out a constitutional challenge the chain launched against the legality of the code.

Robinson Little dropped its legal challenge last month and the money now has been paid.

The union appealed to the board after Robinson Little closed its Kamloops operation Sept. 2, 1975.

The board noted that the chain still operates elsewhere in the province and found the company guilty of failing to bargain in good faith, of refusing to employ or continue to employ persons because they belonged to a trade union and of conducting an illegal lockout.

Scientology Termed Bizarre Hodge-Podge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Gordon Henry Stephenson, a Vancouver psychiatrist, said in an opinion read to a British Columbia Supreme Court hearing Wednesday that Scientology was "a bizarre hodge-podge of mysticism, crude suggestion of allacy and outright fraud, with religious overtones."

The hearing is considering an appeal launched by Dr. Pieter Taams against a decision by the council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. to suspend him from practice for three months and pay fines totalling $5,000.

Taams is a psychiatrist and member of the Church of Scientology.

Dr. Stephenson originally gave his opinion of Scientology at a closed inquiry conducted by a committee appointed by the college council.

The committee's findings, led to the suspension of Dr. Taams for allegedly using Scientology in his medical practice.

The appeal proceedings before Mr. Justicie J. A. Macdonald, brought under Section 61 of the provincial Medical Act, are concerned solely with the evidence on which the inquiry committee based its findings.

Lawyer David Donohoe, for Dr. Taams, read to the court certain passages from the transcript of the six-day hearing before the inquiry committee.

He said Dr. Stephenson told the inquiry committee that Scientology is similar in its techniques to primal therapy, "a way of bringing to the surface primitive emotional experiences," and a treatment that has never been generally acceptable in psychiatry.

Donhoe, who has said Dr. Taams was practising the religious tenets of the Church of Scientology, argued that his use of Scientology was not restricted by the provisions of the Medical Act.

The lawyer went on to argue that Dr. Taams, as a duly qualified medical practitioner, is entitled to engage in experimentation and research, which may lead to new and acceptable forms of medical practice.

Lawyer R. D. Plommer, for the college council, opposed Donohoe's submission and said Scientology is not recognized as a medical procedure.

Donohoe noted that Dr. Stephenson said he had not seen any definitive article that condoned or endorsed Scientology, nor had he read any scientific article that said Scientology is harmful.

Donohoe reminded the court that Dr. Stphenson and another psychiatrist who testified to the inquiry committee both agreed that their knowledge of Scientology is limited and said they could not claim to be expert witnesses in the field.

Law Courts Reopen Soon

The Law Courts building on Burdett Avenue should be reopened next month after two years of renovations.

Present contracts for work on the main floor are within days of completion, deputy public works minister George Giles said Wednesday.

He said the building could be physically ready for occupancy within the next two weeks but it will be up to the attorney-general's ministry and Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz as to just when courts will resume sitting in the building.

Superior courts are largely closed during August but regular sessions will resume after Labor Day.

County and Supreme Courts were moved to temporary accommodation two years ago while two new floors were added to the courthouse and the main floor was converted to make way for the move of provincial court from Fisgard Street, next door to the police station.

While superior courts were jammed into one section of St. Ann's Academy two blocks away, court registry staff continued to work from the main courthouse building, as did the registrar of companies and land registry offices.

The renovations do not provide any more court space than existed before, a point which has drawn criticism from the Victoria Bar Association.

The second and third floors will continue to be used by county and Supreme courts but there will only be the same four courtrooms there have always been. Main floor renovations provide space for the same three courtrooms used by provincial court on Fisgard.

The new fourth and fifth floors are being used for offices and the law library.

The renovations have cost $2.7 million, Giles said. Biggest single contract was $1.8 million for the two additional floors followed by $719,000 for conversion of the main floor for three courtrooms for provincial court.

Giles said provincial officials have been looking at a variety of possible uses for the part of St. Ann's Academy used by the courts for the last two years. Much of the building is being used by the education department.

PM Blamed For Sagging Dollar

NEW YORK (CP) — The Wall Street Journal says the weaker Canadian dollar is a sign that the money markets are telling Prime Minister Trudeau that they have "even less confidence" in his economic management than in that of the current U.S. administration.

The financial newspaper devotes a half-column editorial to the Canadian economy and the demise of the Canadian dollar, now worth about 93 U.S. cents, the lowest level it has reached during the seven years it has been floating.

The Journal says that Trudeau "seems to be even more of a soft-money man" than U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal or White House budget director Bert Lance.

"But we have a feeling that Mr. Trudeau's complacancy is not shared by many of his fellow Canadians . . . Canada isn't doing so well. Its economy has been tangled up by the government effort to apply compulsory wage and price controls for nearly two years. The experiment has been marked by strikes and a flagging growth in production."

The Canadian dollar, meanwhile, ended a week of steady decline on New York money markets Wednesday, the Royal Bank reported.

Although the dollar fell in terms of U.S. currency earlier in the day, it did not drop below Tuesday's low of 92.99 U.S. cents.

A Royal Bank official said the small rise in value came about because there had been more commercial buying of Canadian dollars than selling in the past day-and-a-half."

Wallace Asking Court To Rule on Expenses of the cloud of doubt is paying back the $192.85 the government spent on his hotel and travel expenses.

He criticized the vagueness of the Constitution Act, which forbids such payments, saying that "the act is obscure and is perhaps an absurd law in this day and age."

Wallace said that while he was serving on the steering committee, "it never crossed my mind for a moment that I was doing anything illegal or incorrect," in accepting funds to cover his expenses.

He said the committee consisted mostly of church people and laymen, but that Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) and Harvey Schroeder (SC—Chilliwack) had also been associated with the body.

"But I was the only really active MLA," he said, ". . . the other two didn't play a very active part . . . I'm assuming that neither Mr. Schroeder nor Mr. Levi received any expenses."

Both Schroeder and Levi later said that they had attended few of the committee's functions and didn't think they'd ever incurred any expenses or received any payments from the government.

Premier Bill Bennett said Wallace's problem "certainly points out that we have an archaic act (in the Constitution Act)."

Bennett added that Wallace's position also "opens up the possibility that there are hundreds of MLAs out there" who have been guilty of similar offences over the years.

Radium Tube Still Missing

A tiny silver tube containing radioactive radium is still missing, a spokesman at Royal Jubilee Hospital said today.

The tube, about the size of half a matchstick, disappeared eight days ago when a "freak defect" allowed it to drop from the carrier containing it and two others. Such tubes are used in the treatment of some kinds of cancer.

The radiation hazard from the missing tube is not immediate provided it is not lying in contact with someone's body, the spokesman said.

A search using geiger counters which covered the hospital and grounds, the laundry at Glendale Hospital, the Hartland Road Garbage dump and some staff homes has failed to locate it.

CIA Even Considered Hiring a Magician

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Documents released by the CIA show the spy agency once considered hiring a magician in its top secret experiments on behavior and mind control.

The give-away in the documents was the word "prestidigitation" — sleight of hand — which appeared in a heavily-censored 1953 memo. The memo was written by Sidney Gottlieb, then chief of the chemical division of the CIA's technical services department

Discussing the hiring for $6,000 of an expert to work six months on "sub-project 4" of a drug and behavior program, Gottlieb wrote: "(Censored) seems well qualified to execute this study. He has been a successful (censored) of all forms of (censored). He has made a careful and exhaustive study of the history of prestidigitation and is the possessor of an extensive library of old volumes in this field.

"He has further seriously studied the psychology of (censored) and has instructed graduate students in psychology at (censored.)"

Meanwhile, CIA Director Stansfield Turner says it's extremely unlikely the spy agency will resume testing mind-altering drugs on unsuspecting humans, partly because there's a chance of someone "blowing the whistle."

Turner told two congressional committees on Wednesday the CIA is watched more closely than it was in the past. "I can envision even a CIA employee writing to the Intelligence Oversight Board and blowing the whistle" if secret drug test were resumed, he said.

Also, Turner said, there is a greater awareness of "human rights" issues today than there was in the 1950s, when the agency was conducting secret drug experiments.

"This kind of activity could not happen today without it coming to the attention of authorities to stop it," he said.

Appearing before Senate panels on intelligence and health, Turner declared, "I assure you that the CIA is in no way engaged in either witting or unwitting testing of drugs today."

Discussing a past experiment, the CIA director said Project MK-ULTRA was launched 25 years ago out of "concern for our being taken advantage of by other powers using drugs against our personnel."

Before it was phased out in 1964, Turner said the experiment changed from a defensive to an offensive project and ultimately involved at least 185 non-government researchers and 80 institutions, including 44 colleges, 15 research foundations or chemical companies, 12 hospitals and three prisons.

Nothing Was Found But Tests Went On

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The CIA-backed group that funded "mind-control" experiments in the U.S. and Canada in the late 1950s continued with its work even after concluding that brainwashing was more fiction than fact.

Experts close to the group, called the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology Inc., also admit it was "utter stupidity" to funnel money into Canada for the experiments, which apparently came to nothing.

The group has been defunct since 1965.

While in operation, it dispersed hundreds of thousands of CIA dollars to scientists and institutions around the world, without disclosing the source of the money.

One of the recipients was a prominent Montreal psychiatrist, Dr. D. Ewen Cameron, who received more than $18,000 in 1958 for work that included the testing of mental patients with LSD and two powerful tranquilizers.

The former executive director of the society, Air Force brainwashing expert Col. James Monroe, admitted in an interview this week that two other Canadian projects, one in Montreal and another in Ottawa, were also financed.

But he could not recall any details about these disbursements.

In another development, a U.S. senator said yesterday it was wrong to sponsor such sensitive research in another country.

Without mentioning Canada specificially, Sen. Clifford Case told a joint senate committee:

"I would be interested to see what we (in the U.S.) would think if this were reversed and an official foreign agency came here to pass out money for research."

The great irony of the emerging mind-control scandal here is that the experimentation apparently had few tangible results, despite the spending of millions of dollars between 1953 and 1964.

A New York stress expert, Dr. Lawrence Hinkle, who was part of the original Human Ecology Society, spoke candidly about its creation and aims, in a telephone interview from the Cornall University Medical Centre in New York.

The society, he said, was formed at the prompting of the U.S. government, amid growing alarm that the Soviets and the Chinese might have developed brainwashing techniques.

The government was disturbed by such things as the condition of U.S. prisoners of war when they returned from Korea, and the confession of Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary.

Government officials, including CIA head Allen Dulles, approached neurologist Dr. Harold Wolff at Cornell, a world expert on stress, and asked him to set up a group of scientists to review all available evidence on behavior control.

"This was to be done in the greatest secrecy," Dr. Hinkle remembers. "There was to be no evidence that the U.S. government was involved. We felt all the secrecy was needless, but they wanted it that way."

Dr. Wolff, now dead, set up a core group of five scientists and, using government funds, collected and evaluated data on behavior control from around the world.

Among the contributors were prominent doctors and researchers from Canada, Dr. Hinkle said.

In 1956, the society published a report subtitled: Methods of Interrogation and Indoctrination Used by Communist State Police.

The bottom line of their findings was that even though interrogations had obvious stress effects, there was "no esoteric scientific technique" of brainwashing.

In other words, thought-control as described in cold war novels like the Manchurian Candidate simply did not exist. Period.

"We published the report but, despite our findings, there was a desire to perpetuate the work of the society," Dr. Hinkle said.

"They wanted us to continue."

Most of the original scientists, including Hinkle, balked.

They said it was against their professional policy to continue classified research.

"As far as we were concerned, our task was ended."

But Dr. Wolff, a close friend of Dulles, stayed on and the group moved to Forest Hills, N.Y., to continue its work. At this point, Col. James Munroe came in as executive director.

Undeterred by the authoritative report which knocked down the brainwashing theories, the society, still heavily CIA-financed, moved into a higher gear and funded as many as 200 different projects around the world.

Through the society and other fronts, the CIA continued to pour money into experiments dealing with drugs and alcohol and behavior modification, both on volunteers and unwitting subjects.

At Wednesday's committee hearing, Sen. Edward Kennedy, quoting from classified and censored CIA documents just recently unearthed, alluded to "safehouses" in New York City and San Francisco where bizarre experiments apparently took place.

Reading from a memo, he referred to bedrooms equipped with two-way mirrors and recording equipment, and decored with red curtains and posters of "French can-can dancers."

He said the experiments were called "midnight in climax" but did not elaborate.

A CIA official noted that experimental subjects were picked up in down-town bars and brought back to the safehouses, where they were paid for their co-operation.

But again, due to the classified nature of the documents, there was no elaboration on what took place.

Ottawa Leery In Reaction

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Officials here appear unsure as to how to respond to reports that a Montreal medical institute unwittingly carried out research on brainwashing for the CIA between 1955 and 1960.

A check with various federal government departments Wednesday produced only statements that no one knew about the Montreal case or any other similar incidents.

An official in Solicitor-General Francis Fox's office could not immediately say if the matter was being investigated.

CIA documents obtained by the New York Times have shown that the Allan Memorial Institute, psychiatric wing of the Royal Victoria Hospital, was the recipient of grants from the agency without being aware of it.

An official with some knowledge of the research grants field suggested that the Allan Institute was "tricked" and that one would have to put oneself in the political climate of 20 years ago to understand what happened.

Ottawa had no "clearing house" to vet research grants, he said, and one can only speculate if it is still going on.

A spokesman for Health Minister Marc Lalonde said that while questions about the matter were "interesting," it was difficult to formulate answers.

The department did not scrutinize the books of hospitals to check their grants "and in that matter it would not have made any difference because the books would likely not have shown anything."

CIA funds amounted to $20,000 to $30,000 a year for a couple of years and were channelled to the Allan Institute by the now-defunct Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology, according to the Society's former executive director, Col. James L. Monroe.

He said the Allan Institute was not aware of the source of funds; nor was its director, the late Dr. Ewen Cameron, who led the research which included sensory deprivation experiments and the administration of LSD.

New Bilingual Bonus Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will likely announce this fall a revised policy on bilingualism in the public service, including bonuses for more federal employees who have to work in both official languages, a treasury board spokesman said today.

At present bonuses of seven per cent are paid to secretaries and stenographers who must work in French and English. But other federal employees have argued for the bonus as well.

Some employees in Montreal offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and Canada Manpower recently refused to speak English until they received the bilingual bonus.

Treasury Board President Robert Andras has said the government now is committed to paying the bilingual bonus to more employees and when it is announced, probably this fall, it will be retroactive to Nov. 1, 1975.

The government has been reviewing its bilingual policy for more than a year following mounting complaints from public servants about its implementation and a report by Keith Spicer, commissioner of official languages, that questioned the effectiveness of second-language training for some federal employees.

Spicer said language training should be emphasized in the public school system.

Heroin Addiction

Health Minister Bob McClelland is making it exceedingly difficult for people not to be skeptical about his proposed compulsory treatment plan for drug addicts.

The timing of his announcement, for one thing, doesn't do much for the provincial government's credibility. It seems timed to get the maximum publicity for the least amount of substantive action.

He announced the government's intentions Wednesday at a Vancouver news conference with simultaneous distribution in Victoria of a six-page press release, but the minister said the legislation enabling the program to be set up probably won't come before the legislature until next spring, meaning it will be late 1978 before anything gets going.

Why announce it now if the government is not ready to proceed? If it is McClelland's intention to build up public opinion in favor of the plan, which is radical in several respects, then the public expects rather more than a press release. Where are the supporting studies and documents, the expert advice which supports the government?

One would expect a rather carefully reasoned analysis of the problem, especially since the government is proposing such "a new, fresh (and perhaps unconstitutional) attack" on heroin addiction.

For McClelland's proposal, judging only from his news release, treads hard on our civil liberties. There seems to be double jeopardy in part of the plan. Someone may serve out a prison term for a criminal offence such as robbery, which he may have committed to get money for heroin, but which is irrelevant to the courts in its deliberations.

But under the McClelland plan, after he has paid his debt to society for robbery the prison may then refer him to a panel of experts, who may "sentence" him to a period of further incarceration in a heroin "treatment centre," i.e. prison by another name.

The key is the minister's promised legislation, which he says will "establish that the possession or administration of heroin, or a historical record of use, will be sufficient grounds to warrant an examination of the individual by a competent evaluation panel."

Here is where the McClelland plan will certainly run into tough opposition from the civil liberties people and constitutional experts. Now, under the criminal code of Canada only possession or sale of heroin is an offence. The provinces have no authority to amend the code, and if B.C. proposes unilaterally to make a "historical record of use" grounds for forcible incarceration, there will be loud squawks from Ottawa.

Another worry is that the 150-bed treatment centre on the Lower Mainland, which is to be the centrepiece of the plan, will simply fill up with the worst "hard cases" (McClelland's words) where the heavy security conditions will just reinforce the atmosphere and background that make ordinary prisons academies of drug addiction.

Heroin addiction is such a damnable difficult problem to eradicate that there are no simple solutions; there may not be any complicated answers to the dilemma either. But there are enough serious questions about the McClelland plan to suggest that it may make things worse instead of better.

Absurd and Monstrous

Although this is only the fourth day of a 31-day month, it is already easy to announce the award for Most Irresponsible Statement of the Month. Not even the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, a frequent winner of the award, will be able to top the contribution made Wednesday by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe in a statement in which he strongly hinted that the government would lock out all its civil servants if the liquor store employees went on strike.

Wolfe, to be sure, never used the word "lockout" in his carefully-worded statement. But it is quite impossible to take any other meaning from a paragraph in which he said:

"To make the issue very clear, if selective strike action takes place, the government would be forced to consider the implications for the whole public service. In other words, all government employees would be affected, except those in essential services."

Unless Wolfe and his cabinet colleagues have done some remarkably creative thinking, a lockout is just about the only way the government has of "affecting" all employees in such a situation.

The entire idea of a government locking out its own civil servants is so absurd and so monstrous it is quite difficult to take Wolfe seriously. But even allowing for the usual sabre-rattling that goes on during labor negotiations, it appears the government really is seriously considering the idea of a lockout.

The plan of the B.C. Government Employees Union (BCGEU) to strike only the liquor stores (if the strike weapon is ever used at all) is both a clever strategem and a relatively responsible one. Although many members of the public would become exceedingly irate if liquor stores shut down, no actual harm would be done — except to the provincial treasury which relies on those liquor stores to bring in about $250,000 a day in revenue. From the public's point of view, actual good might result—fewer car accidents because of fewer impaired drivers; an increase in business for hotels and restaurants that still had liquor, and so on.

It would be hard, therefore, for the government to have any justification for ordering the liquor store employees back to work, and the rest of the union membership could easily contribute enough to give the striking workers a fair proportion of their normal salary. Hence, the cleverness of the idea.

However, if the government followed Wolfe's lockout idea, the public would be the chief victim. The government, of course, would actually save money because it wouldn't have to pay all those civil servants. The union members would suffer financially. But the public would be the big loser because they would not be able to obtain services from a government whose purpose is to serve them.

Usually in a strike situation, the public's first instinct is to blame the union, sometimes fairly, sometimes unfairly. But Wolfe should be warned right now that the public will see through any lockout ploy he is inventing and he will do nothing but generate support for the BCGEU.

The Surgical Shuffle

OTTAWA — A tradition, dating back to confederation and perhaps even earlier, requires a pundit to devote his last pre-summer holiday column to shuffling the prime minister's cabinet for him.

This time it isn't easy to think up helpful hints. The entire cabinet is stale and tired; to cure its ills would take the surgery of an election rather than the band-aid of a shuffle.

Since the election is off, a shuffle it will have to be. The problem that now intrudes is that there are, as management consultants say, too many variables.

For a start, consider the case of Finance Minister Donald Macdonald. He is pondering whether to pursue fortune with the Toronto law firm of McCarthy and McCarthy or fame by remaining in Ottawa and thus holding onto his spot at the head of the After-Trudeau-Who? queue.

Reach for Ring

Macdonald, who possesses rather more of the "royal jelly" than he lets on, would like to reach for the brass ring but not if it means holding out his hand for as long as did former Liberal cabinet minister Paul Martin (who in the end missed it) or Britain's Anthony Eden (who got it, but too late to do anything with it).

At a guess, Macdonald will stay, at least until next year when he'll be better able to judge whether the next election will be Trudeau's last, or his next-but-last, or his next-but-one-to-last.

If Macdonald doesn't go, one seat around the oval cabinet table won't be empty. Another seat won't be empty either — if my meaning still is clear — unless Trade Minister Jean Chretien leaves to contest the Quebec Liberal leadership.

Here the variables begin. Macdonald's decision will influence Chretien's decision. If Macdonald goes, Chretien is more likely to stay since the finance portfolio would be open to him. If Macdonald stays, Chretien is more likely to go since his promotion to finance would be delayed for six months at least.

To satisfy both his stars, Trudeau would have to elevate Chretien to Finance and Macdonald to External Affairs.

More variables. Don Jamieson once planned to leave before the next election, but has changed his mind since becoming External Affairs Secretary. To persuade Jamieson to unchange his mind about not retiring — if my meaning, once again, is clear — Trudeau would have to convince Paul Martin that, at his age of 74, it's time for him to retire as High Commissioner to London.

Possiblity A, therefore, is Jamieson to London, Macdonald to External and Chretien to Finance.

Possibility B is the three of them remaining where they now are.

"B", if it happens, would make things really difficult. Minister Without Portfolio Jack Horner, who keeps saying he's been promised a major portfolio, has yet to be taken care of.

With will, a way can be found. Transport Minister Otto Lang, say sources who ought to be reliable, is ready to give up the Wheat Board that has been his personal fiefdom for eight years. Horner may not consider the Wheat Board enough; having crossed the floor, though, Horner now is in a corner with nowhere left to turn.

All this is just housekeeping. To be in the least creative, Trudeau would have to undertake some minor surgery. Three ministers deserve to be excised: Bud Cullen of Manpower and Tony Abbott of Consumer Affairs, who have both done little, if anything; Jean-Pierre Goyer of Supply and Services, who has done too much, if not everything, that he shouldn't have. Some inspired shuffling now becomes possible. Romeo Leblanc, for example, has done all and more than anyone could in Fisheries and Einvironment. His natural spot would be Regional Economic Expansion from which the present minister, Marcel Lessard, could move on to the challenge of Supply and Services. To bring Consumer Affairs back to life, Trudeau could — by which I mean should — promote Toronto MP Martin O'Connell, once a minister and then defeated in the 1972 election.

Housekeeping

A couple of rough spots remain. Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan — a tidbit I've been saving up — has told friends the portfolio he'd really like would be Defence. I'd keep him down on the farm. Marc Lalonde has been Health and Welfare minister for a post-Paul Martin record of five years. I can't think where to put him, except not into the portfolio he wants — finance.

That's about it. Not much would be changed. To revive the cabinet's exhausted imagination would take, as I said, an election. That variable now is out of Trudeau's control until next spring. All we, and he, can hope for in the meantime is the odd band-aid applied here and the odd dressing changed there.

Pipe Dreams

This July 29 we regret the new ban on those writers of modest noms-de-plume who might have given us resumes of recent important books like these:

Ginzer's The Rocking Chair Syndrome in Western Decline, Oslovang's Stress Inhibition of the Sweet-Sour Taste Buds in 4,589 Nordic Males in Relation to Alcoholism, Butts' quantum physics landmark Does Ultimate Matter Matter?, Lostrovich's philosophical 'X' the Unknown, and Smith's definitive story in corporation jurisprudence, Pipe Dreams — the history of continuing litigation from 1740 to 1902, in the tort of the Old Kentuck Tobacco Co. et al, vs. Noah Webster's Dictionary, et al; on the controversial implications in the Webester definition of the words pipe dream. — J. Claremont, Victoria.

Values Changed

Since ironically suggesting body rub parlors for women I have had some illuminating conversations which have reinforced the realization that in the last decade moral values have changed drastically.

The term, body rub parlor, has become synonymous with erotic massage and sexual gratification, and if this is what Victoria is being offered, let's be mature enough to call it a house of prostitution not a health spa, because that casts aspersions on legitimate health spas, masseurs and masseuses.

There are many who feel that sexual intimacy between single people is not sinful, certainly not adulterous, and that those of us who enjoy a loving, satisfying relationship with a spouse are being piously smug when we deny single people the means whereby they can legally obtain a similar measure of sexual satisifaction.

Society has removed practically all restrictions on what may be offered in the marketplace, and what was once termed obscene has now become the norm. So are we not being hypocritical when we legalize and condone the sale of erotic, salacious literature, photographs and movies that deal with sex explicitly, but refuse to legalize the establishments that would assuage the sexual passions thus arroused?

If we don't want legalized prostitution, let's start eliminating eroticism from the marketplace. — Ruby Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Inn Not Saved

You are wrong when you say Wickaninnish has been saved. It will be a perversion for these many reasons.

It is a beautiful bit of architecture designed specifically and complete in itself as a hotel. To take out all those bathrooms and convert bedroom space into public rooms will be expensive and end in an inappropriate piece of architecture. People don't go to the wilds to sit inside and be lectured to — that is an urban exercise. Certainly that beautiful beach can get along without a tea room. Many older people will be excluded from ever seeing or continuing to enjoy Long Beach.

You mislead when you write about accommodation at $40 to $50 a night. Quoted prices in the B.C. tourist accommodation publication are lower and, more important, compare favorably with nearby places where there is no maid service and no dining room.

It is a bad decision by Parks Canada but perhaps splendid and nice, though inappropriate, for those that work for them. — A. Hazeland, 2465 Cadboro Bay Road.

Unjust Law

I read the article of Mr. Sidenius (Cablevison Pirating on Increase) in the Times of July 25 with interest and I would like to point out the following:

The cable TV signal consists of a band with from below Channel 2 to Channel 13 or higher. The slot between Channels 6 and 7 happens to be the FM band which the cable TV companies distribute in addition to the cable TV signals. There is very little or no extra cost for the cable TV companies to carry this extra information. Splitters in homes are generally installed to provide a "split" from the TV to the FM radio.

The signal delivered to each home is approximately zero DBM; splitting the signal does not impede the cable TV facilities. It cuts the signal in the home down. The subscriber divides his signal. If he splits it a number of times there will be no signal left. He does not take more from the cable TV company, he only divides.

The law prohibiting the practice, if created for this purpose, is an unjust law created totally in favor of the cable TV companies. Fortunately the law is difficult to enforce except when all outlets were monthly inspected (not economical).

Cable TV was initially called community antenna TV, implying that the systems were designed to serve the community. It has been translated into a highly profitable cable TV business. Now that the TV cable is in our house and we as subscribers have paid for it through our rental, unlimited financial gains are on the horizon. Pay TV will be available and probably a host of other "services" at "additional" charges on the already paid for facilities. — TV Subscriber.

Ferry Troubles

I am a tourist from Ontario with private licence plates on a normal sized Econoline 100 window van sitting in the ferry lineup at Swartz Bay watching the third ferry pull out since I arrived in lineup.

Why? Because for some unknown reason I am considered "commercial" and only so many feet of commercial vehicles are allowed on each ferry. Meanwhile, I watch van after van — including those obviously on commercial use — pull onto the ferries while I sit.

I have been told I will be put on the truck ferry leaving at 3:15 p.m. for sure, well-segregated from that untouchable group of people known as tourists.

Tourism is dying on Vancouver Island? No, sir, the B.C. Ferry "service" is killing it. — Sonja Carruthers, 58 Princeway Drive, Scarboro, Ont.

School Praised

May I use the services of your paper to express to Mr. Wally Russell and his staff at Spectrum school our personal appreciation for the manner in which the school is administered.

We have lived in four provinces and the school year 1976-77 was the best year of all for our son who attended Spectrum. Thank you, staff; we appreciate the individual attention and care given to your students. — Rev. R. D. Johnstone, 4050 Carey Road.

Ridiculous Ads

I would appreciate an opportunity to give my opinion of the travel industry ministry's advertisements on television informing B.C. citizens of the proper way to treat a tourist (e.g. "give accurate directions and even walk along a block or so to point the way" and "offer to take a picture of the visitor with his camera"). I personally find it insulting to be told how to treat a tourist as though I would be at a loss if Grace McCarthy did not tell me how to act towards one.

Also, there are ads which inform us that we should help tourists out because they contribute $800 per person to B.C.'s economy. If I give directions to a tourist it is not because they are contributing to B.C.'s economy; it is because I too appreciate people helping me when I travel. If I were a tourist and saw this ad on TV, I would think that every time a local smiled at me or helped me out he was thinking of the money I was contributing to the economy.

It irks me to think of the money the government has spent on these ridiculous ads and on the "We have a special smile for you" buttons after raising the ferry fares and the sales tax. The reason the tourists are not coming is not that British Columbians are not smiling enough; it is because B.C. is just too expensive. — Nancy Killick, 10-2981 Craigowan Road.

Provincial Job

The city of Victoria deserves our congratulations. After years of indecision over the fate of the Crystal Garden, they have recognized two important facts: that the building is far too important to the city to allow its demolition and that the provincial government has avoided its responsibility in this area for far too long.

The Municipal Act amendment which placed the responsibility for heritage preservation squarely on the shoulders of the municipalities was a dereliction of provincial responsibility in the first place. I am sure that the provincial secretary's department was overjoyed at having a new wastepaper basket in which to put all appeals for provincial help with heritage buildings. It has taken the municipalities rather a long time to notice that they have shouldered a provincial task without the provincial resources to go with it.

The next question obviously is: will the province accept, or will it find some excuse to pass the buck again?

Those of your readers who have long been dismayed at the prospect of losing this important piece of Victoria's identity would do well to spend 15 minutes this summer in helping to save it — 15 minutes and 12 cents to tell Mr. Bennett and the Social Credit cabinet that it is essential that the province help to save the Crystal Garden. — Carolyn Smyly, 4354 Wilkinson Road.

Unsafe Road

Once again there has been another accident in the 1100 block Goldstream Avenue. Though this one was not fatal it is still serious. There have been four fatal accidents in this area. The lay of the road is winding and narrow, with parking on one side. Children must walk on the road and residents must back cars out directly onto the road with visibility not good. A public beach is in this area. This now adds to the traffic and people congestion. One other family and I have filed a complaint to the traffic division of Colwood RCMP. We would like to see:

(1) a winding road sign replaced; (2) a lowering of speed in the 1100 and 1200 blocks to 25 m.p.h.; (3) a warning sign of "caution children" or "beach area" at the north and south end.

A speed limit of 35 m.p.h. is too fast for the lay and visibility of the road. Residents are apt to be cautious, but people outside this area have no warning signs to alert them to the conditions. If signs are posted, this can warn them and the excuse of "I didn't know" can't hold up.

The RCMP have said they will forward the complaint with their request. We would like all people who drive this route and residents to forward letters to:

(1) Traffic division, RCMP Colwood; (2) Mr. Harper, Highways Dept., Burnside Road; (3) Lyle Kahl, MP, Esquimalt—Ona Henderson, 1146 Goldstream Avenue.

MOBUTU . . . statesman's savvy

Coke Connection

By MURRAY KEMPTON
The Progressive

The Katangan rebels who transiently imperiled President Mobutu of Zaire a short time ago are now reported in disorderly collapse, and the Congo seems once again to have been saved for civilization.

When the Katangans invaded Zaire, President Mobutu called upon the West to rescue him and incidentally itself from the maw of communist aggression. There has been a deplorable shortage in the communist threat supply in recent months, but all the same it did seen a trifle bizarre to be asked to make do with the Katangans.

They had not troubled the good order of the free world since the mid-1960s, when they were the fighting arm of the conservative Katangan secessionist movement led by the defeated and departed Moise Tshombe. Now they have reappeared to invade Zaire and to be viewed with alarm as agents of the Soviet and the Cuban communists. The Katangans seem dismally unqualified for any such cosmic role, being just tired mercenary exiles who want only to go home.

Nonetheless, they represented a dire threat to Mobutu, who at once appealed for the assistance of all freedom-loving people, especially the United States, a long-standing patron.

The Carter Administration indulged in a few huffinds and puffings and then, in a most admirable outbreak of common sense, settled for helping Ziare with dribs and drabs of non-lethal supplies. Then Mobutu solemnly requested 20,000 cases of Coca-Cola to sustain his troops in their desperate hour, and the image of Zaire as a bastion against communist expansion was dissipated in general laughter.

And yet was not Mobutu's public testimonial to the virtues of Coca-Cola as sovereign remedy for his country's wounds only one more example of the statesmanlike vision that has so often saved him in the past? He had already found other countries to bail him out of his immediate troubles and he was planning his postwar world.

Others may struggle to detect any fundamental difference between the Democrats and the Republicans; but only General Mobutu is wise enough to understand that the real shift in power has been to Coca-Cola in its war with Pepsi-Cola Carter's is a Coca-Cola, as Nixon's was a Pepsi-Cola Administration. Under the Republicans, Pepsi-Cola established itself in Moscow; now, under the Democrats, Coca-Cola has installed its president as Under Secretary of Defense.

General Mobutu knows where true power lies; other Americans may waver in their commitments, but our soft drink manufacturers can be trusted enduringly to love those who love them.

Climate The Big Environmental Issue

By HAYNES JOHNSON
Washington Post

In the beginning there was heaven and earth and darkness upon the deep and great lights and a firmanent. Then there was man, who was given dominion over the fish of the sea and over the fowl of the air and over every living thing that moves and over the earth itself. And the Lord looked upon his creations and proclaimed, behold, it was very good.

"What may be perhaps the central environmental problem of the planet is the problem of what's going to happen to the climate," Robert M. White was saying. "The climate is really the only environmental characteristic that can utterly change our society and our civilization. We do have environmental problems, and they're serious ones, the preservation of species among them, but the climate is the one environmental problem that's so pervasive in its effects on the society — whether it impacts on the production of agriculture, whether it determines the character of our energy usages, or whether it determines what's going to happen to the deserts of the world. You're dealing with what's going to happen to the earth's atmosphere, and it's so complex and has such broad impacts on society that to really get at it requires a treatment and approach that we've never been able to take in this country, let alone internationally."

White is our foremost weather and climate expert. For the past 14 years he's served five presidents as head of the Weather Bureau. A few days ago he took up a new position as chairman of the National Academy of Science's Climate Research Board.

"We have fluctuations in our weather and climate that are totally natural," he said, "that will occur without anything that man does. And then we have fluctuations in our climate which may be brought about by man's activities. Conditions like the one we're involved in now, for example, give rise to questions as to what is happening to our atmosphere, and whether we can anticipate situations like these."

Then, quietly, a reflection:

"The other part of this is what man is doing to the climate. And there are some things that are terribly, terribly intriguing. Some of them have an ominous character to them."

The headline on my desk, emblazoned across the front page, proclaims: "COOLER, DRIER AIR ARRIVING TOMORROW." It's come, and the latest alert has passed. Also scattered across my desk are piles and piles of newspaper clippings, all on the same subject.

AIR QUALITY
HERE WORST
ON RECORD

". . . COG (The Washington area's Council of Governments) extended the air pollution alert yesterday for the fourth straight day as the 90-degree temperatures and absence of wind caused automobile emissions to gather in the atmosphere at hazardous levels. 'This is the worst we've had yet,' said David Di Julio, head of COG's air resources program. 'There have been four alerts since May and I expect there will be a few more. We are setting the highest index readings we've ever had.' The increase in car travel has made this kind of pollution worse rather than better since the 1970 Clean Air Act, Di Julio said . . ."

The villain

That story ran two summers ago. There's something startling about these stories printed over the last two years. It's not their writing style. They are, in the mass, virtual carbon copies, with the same phrases, same descriptions, same explanations, same warnings: "Most pollution here is the result of sunlight reacting on vehicle exhaust to form ozone." (last summer) . . . And: "Despite efforts by COG and EPA over the last several years, no enforceable program for limiting vehicle traffic during an alert exists." (also last summer)

The stories are the same, but with a vital difference. The conditions they describe get worse, the stories come more frequently.

One year ago last spring: "The Council of Governments' air pollution alert, the earliest in history, remains in effect as . . ."

Another alert? What else is new? Stagnant air? Stay inside. Trouble breathing? Tough luck.

The bite from the "dog days" of summer gets more severe, but we wearily accept it as our reality. Mark Twain, you know: Everyone talks about the weather, no one ever does anything about it. Certainly not the government.

Robert White takes the positive view. Sure it looks bad, sure the alerts are increasing, sure the levels of pollution are rising. But look at the situation from a different perspective. What would it be like now if we hadn't taken even the steps we have? With population still rising, with automobile production increasing, with the numbers of car trips growing, think what the pollution would be like if we had no air quality act, no Environmental Protection Agency? "We would be in a desperate situation," he says.

But there is recent evidence that gives him pause. It now appears, from extensive research, that the levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere are increasing to the point that they could have a profound long-term impact on the planet, and all the life on it. "Given reasonable scenarios for the use of fossil fuels, oil and gas, over the next century, it can reasonably be anticipated that there will be a significant rise in the world temperature of the order of let's say six degrees," he says.

Normal changes in world temperatures from year to year are very small. A half a degree would be large. A change of only a few degrees can move the earth from a ice to a non-ice age.

"So you're talking about a change that is very large," he says, "and a change that could impact everything one does in society . . . It may change the whole nature of the whole planet, and change how people live and how they interact with that planet. So you're talking about something that is really a very, very fearful thing were it to come about."

And that would be a change man has created.

'I Have Right to Know What RCMP Doing'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — In a recent column I suggested that Trudeau had overcome the stock apprehension every modern prime minister has had in tackling the RCMP.

A contrary view held by other observers in Ottawa is that the PM was forced into the royal commission on the RCMP and "security" by the chief officer of the Mounties, Maurice Nadon.

Nadon is giving way to a successor shortly. The thesis is that he was damned if he would leave the force with a cloud of doubt hanging over it as a result of ministers ducking their responsibility (e.g. Goyer) and many citing the notorious "break-ins" in Toronto and Montreal as proof of what dolts the Mounties are.

NADON

Out in Open

An inquiry we have. Let us hope most of it is out in public, that some ofthemore fierce opposition critics appear before it, and that any citizen with examples of RCMP vigilance or stupidity in the field of security will send them in or express them first hand to the commissioners.

I noted that the last inquiry (made public in 1969) recommended both the separation of security and counterespionage as an organization from the RCMP, and the creation of a regular and powerful "security review board" on which there would be citizens proven as defenders of civil rights. It seems certain these recommendations will be in the minds of the commissioners from the first day.

Most of us come to the problem of the Mounties and security from one of two viewpoints.

Clandestine

The first is that the Canadian nation and society is always in danger from subversion, particularly radical or leftist or Marxist or Red Russian or Red Chinese subversion. Such enemies and quislings operate in a clandestine fashion, with enormous resources of hostile foreign governments behind them. Those holding such views generally insist on total secrecy for this aspect of the force.

The contrary viewpoint is the one I subscribe to: That there are basically few internal or domestic threats to Canadian society, and the most dangerous one (Quebec separation) was legitimized long ago, first by the Pearson government, then by its successor. Further, the appeal of "foreign" ideologies and their agents to Canadians is almost laughable. Unreasonable men who see "reds under every bed" have literally nothing in the past quarter century of Canadian affairs to sustain them.

Further, security screening and "loyalty" testing ought to represent specific and publicly-definable requirements with a publicly-seen organization in charge. (In other words, I'm like many other doubters of Mountie efficiency and rational attitudes in the security field who agree with the two big recommendations which were rejected by Trudeau in 1969.)

Let me close with the quantitative aspect of the problem as it affects the Mounties.

In 1963, almost 15 years ago, the RCMP spent $65 million — it had a total establishment of 8,568 people, only 1,320 of whom were civilians. In the year ending March, 1978 the RCMP's spending projection is $487 million. The total personnel authorized is 19,013 of whom some 1,700 will be civilians.

Immense Growth

Those figures tell a story of immense growth in personnel and costs in the RCMP. In 1963 the force had only 173 commissioned officers; today it has over 460. Indeed, the total actual strength of the police in all of Canada today is almost exactly 50,000 persons — therefore, the Mounties represent two out of every five police.

As a matter of comparison, we only have some 13,000 self-employed practising lawyers in Canada — and there are some 8,000 penitentiary guards looking after some 10,000 prisoners.

The annual report of the RCMP to the solicitor-general gives more information on the musical ride or the band than it does on the "general security service" of the RCMP. Admittedly, the government phone book does have a dozen numbers and a few names under "security", and over in the solicitor-general's establishment there are notes on a "police and security planning and analysis branch."

My point is that buried in the 19,000 plus and the close to half a billion dollars a year spending there is a sizable and expensive group dealing only with security its anonymity, for itself or within the RCMP, angers me as a citizen (rather than as journalist). In theory and in practice my view of democracy says that I should have the right to know who does what for my government and how much the operations cost.

Courts of First Resort

russell baker

A lawsuit against Yale University alleges that women students have been sexually harassed by the Yale faculty. The court is asked to make the university make the faculty behave itself, as indeed the faculty should, if in fact it has been misbehaving, which Yale officially denies.

Is this the kind of problem that really requires solution by the ponderous and expensive machinery of the courthouse? There are surely quicker and cheaper ways of making professors mind their manners. In a more imaginative past when Americans were accustomed to dispose of such nuisances without help from Blackstone, the problem would have been solved handily with a private initiative.

A robust father might have appeared carrying a shotgun at the office of one of the more obnoxious offenders. A large brother or boyfriend might have blackened his eye. A small woman might have cooled his passion with a hat pin, and an only slightly clever small woman might have crushed his ego with a few simple words thrust neatly into his vulnerable asininity.

To be sure, these solutions have defects. Damaging a man's ego is a cruel act of violence. So are bruising his eye, puncturing his buttock and unleashing a father with bloodshot eyes to wander the campus. On the other hand, all provide immediate relief and cost nothing. Moreover, and most importantly, they afford the woman with a problem a healthy sense of self-reliance and ingenuity.

The courthouse solution is not only expensive, troublesome to the victim and time-consuming, but also debilitating to her self-esteem, for it reminds her that to cope with the problem which her mother could solve in an afternoon she requires the aid of lawyers, a judge, a jury, witnesses, transcripts, three years of litigation and two appeals courts.

The Yale women who have taken this route are simply conforming to a new national habit, of course. Hand an American a problem and he immediately takes it to court. Half the population over the age of 30 is at law because it lacks the ingenuity to solve such humdrum problems as how to live with somebody who snores or dislikes your taste in television, and how to divide up the dishes, the children, the house and the jewelry before plodding on into middle age.

As a result, these people are often well advanced toward senility before the law has straightened out their problems for them. Everybody knows some aging bankrupt who got that way because he and his former wife didn't think they could solve the problem of what to do on Saturday night without hiring lawyers.

This is not the fault of the law or the courts. They are expensive luxuries. No sensible person would go to them to solve anything unless he was obscenely rich and had years to kill. And yet, we do.

In the past 20 years this tendency to tell all problems to the court has become pronounced in politics. It seems to have begun with the race issue. For the best part of a century most politicians simply declined to try solving the race problem, and for good political reason.

They feared that any constitutional solution to which they subscribed might destroy their careers. By the end of World War II, this reasoning had become dubious, but by that time the political habit of ignoring the race problem had become pure political reflex.

The Supreme Court's desegregation decision of 1954 opened a new way out for the politicians. If the courts could be forced to make the more troublesome politicial decisions, the politicians could escape retribution, at least in this world, and even profit from denouncing those court decisions which particularly annoyed the electorate. Everyone could have a grand time abusing Earl Warren for coming to grips with national problems so urgent that the politicians were afraid to deal with them.

Since 1954 American politics increasingly shifted to the courts, with the tacit consent of the politicians, as the various "rights movements" that altered society looked less and less to Congress for their success and fought for their goals through the court system.

Politicians profess unhappiness with this, but their lamentations are not to be taken too seriously. The activity of the courts, after all, gives the politicians not only the chance to escape blame for inescapable social changes that enrage the people of a conservative land, but also the opportunity for some politically profitable abuse of the courts as meddlers in political business. Thus in Boston, the local pols flourish on the luxury of being able to denounce the court-ordered desegregation because the court has relieved them of responsibility for carrying out the desegregation law.

This hardly makes for a healthy political system, for it encourages politicians not to deal with problems politicians ought to be dealing with. The courts become their place of first resort, as they have with the sexually harassed women of Yale. It encourages the failure of imagination.

Viet Aid Field Narrowed

The legislature's special committee to provide medical aid to Vietnamese children today narrowed the possible recipients of its $2 million in funds down to five groups.

On Aug. 11 representatives of the Save the Children Fund, the Friends' Society (a Quaker organization), UNICEF, Red Cross and the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada will be called to make pitches for their respective groups.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace moved the list of possible recipients be set at five because otherwise the aid committee could spend forever interviewing humanitarian organizations looking for financial assistance.

"Let's not have an ever-increasing round of interviews. I think it's imperative that we not drag this out."

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis agreed, saying that "time is of the essence — if we can wrap this up as quickly as possible so much the better."

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) supported Wallace's move to establish a short list but stressed that "if we're unsatisified by the presentations we may open the list again at that time."

Cocke said later that he doubts the committee will have any trouble selecting a worthy group from among the five to be called.

Act Aims at BCGEU—Fryer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legislation to reorganize British Columbia's colleges and vocational schools appears to be the government's way of brushing aside the B.C. Government Employees Union's bid to represent vocational teachers, John Fryer, union president, said Wednesday.

Fryer accused the Social Credit government of trying to wipe out the BCGEU certification — at the urging of education officials — because the union represents its members "a bit too well" to suit officials.

Under the Colleges and Provincial Institutes Act, which was introduced Tuesday, academic personnel at colleges and vocational schools will have to choose by secret vote among three options for representation. This includes their current unions, new unions under the B.C. Labor Code, or a professional association.

The act would put non-university post-secondary institutions under a single umbrella with 100 per cent provincial financing. It also would create two kinds of institutions: colleges, run by boards appointed by participating school boards; and institutions, run by nine-member boards appointed by cabinet.

Companion legislation, the Apprenticeship and Training Development Act, introduced by Labor Minister Allan Williams, would create a province-wide apprenticeship board to set policies and qualifications for apprenticeship programs.

In other reaction, Frank Beinder, executive director of the B.C. Association of College Councils, said some provisions of the bill are good, such as the 100-per-cent funding, making corporate entities of the colleges and continued school board influence in college affairs through school board appointments to college boards.

But he said he felt less happy about introduction of intermediary bodies between the ministry and the college boards.

He said one section forbids college board membership to teachers and students on grounds of conflict of interest, which would cut off mounting pressure for teacher and student access to college decision-making.

Smoking.

What are you going to do about it?

If you've given up smoking more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it so much you don't want to give it up at all.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?

You've probably tried cigarettes that promise extra mildness and found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which brought you right back to your regular brand.

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The full, rich flavour of Virginia tobaccos. But here's the big difference. Vantage has a specially designed filter to give you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

Vantage is not a heavy drag cigarette. You don't have to work hard getting the smoke through so that all the joy of smoking is lost.

Rich taste and easy draw. Good reasons for any thoughtful smoker to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

We suggest you try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

PARKING STEAL

TORONTO (CP) — Almost 40 per cent of Toronto's parking meters give motorists more time than they pay for.

A survey, conducted by the federal consumer and corporate affairs department as part of its program of inspectng weighing and measuring devices used in trade, found that 77 of 185 meters tested gave more time than was purchased.

Three meters short-changed drivers and 105 were accurate.

Rondeau Verdict Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Gilles Cauette, acting Social Credit leader, said Wednesday he is planning no disciplinary action against MP Gilbert Rondeau following his conviction for tax evasion, and he criticized the guilty verdict instead.

Quebec Sessions Court Judge Yvon Roberge fined Rondeau $5,050 last week in Granby after finding the Social Credit MP for Sheffort guilty on 17 counts of fraudulent tax evasion in connection with a party fund-raising scheme.

"On the basis of the judgment I have in my hands right now, I've got nothing against Gilbert," Caouette said in an interview.

Lawyers Rake Secrecy in Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Bar Association said today that a federal policy statement on public access to government documents indicates the government is determined to avoid significant reform.

A bar association study, prepared by Murray Rankin, professor of law at the University of Victoria, says legislation easing freedom of information should provide for full, independent review by the courts of government rulings.

The government policy paper, issued in June, said there is no way a judicial officer can be properly made aware of all the factors that may have led to a decision to withhold a document.

It also proposed a wide range of exceptions under which the government could refuse to release information, and would allow documents to be withheld at the discretion of a minister.

Rankin says the government's rejection of judicial review suggests "that the evidence or arguments that a minister can advance to support non-disclosure are so insubstantial or ephemeral that he could never hope to persuade an independent person of their worth."

Alternatively, it would imply that "a judge lacks the intelligence or capacity to understand the evidence or arguments and to give them appropriate weight."

"That either argument could be seriously advanced by a present-day government is eloquent evidence of its determination to avoid any meaningful legislation on the subject," Rankin says.

His study, entitled "Freedom of Information in Canada: Will the Doors Stay Shut?", is the bar association's first official response to the government policy paper issued by Secretary of State John Roberts.

The bar association study says that only judges possess the legitimacy and independence to make access to information a meaningful legislative right. The judiciary's day-to-day experience in ruling on the production of documents would make it uniquely suited to this task.

Review of documents in private could provide the procedural safeguards the government is concerned about.

The study is critical of the categories of exemption from disclosure suggested in the green paper. A proposal exempting information "obtained in the course of investigations pertaining to the administration . . . of an Act of Parliament" is wide enough to embrace "practically every piece of information in the government's hands," it says.

Other exemptions are also so broadly cast that it is "difficult to envisage an example of a request for information that could not be denied."

Slower Increase Rate Forecast for Food

TORONTO (CP) — Food prices will continue to rise the rest of this year but at a more moderate rate than in the first half of the year, says a report released by the Retail Council of Canada.

It predicts the over-all increase for the year will be between seven and nine per cent.

Consumers experienced a 6.3-per-cent increase in the first six months of the year, said the council, which represents most major food retailers.

The predicted over-all increase compares with a 1976 increase of 1.5 per cent.

Key factors affecting the prices that Canadian consumers will pay for food later this year are weather, what happens in the meat market and the size of the grain harvest.

"One of the key unknowns is meat prices, and, in particular, beef," said the council's report.

Beef prices are expected to rise late this year, but the extent of the increase will depend on the supply of hogs and poultry and consumers' reaction to increases in food prices.

The council says food prices will also be affected by higher energy costs, pushing up production and distribution costs.

The lower value of the Canadian dollar will result in higher prices for imported food products.

The council also said labor pressures will contribute to increased prices for processed and packaged foods.

The council predicts: Coffee and tea prices to continue at high levels; expanding supplies of meat, milk and eggs due to the expected good harvest of feed grains, and a generally promising outlook for the price and supply of most fruits and vegetables.

The council said that the Florida citrus freeze, a new federal dairy policy, the lower exchange rate for the Canadian dollar and increased energy costs all contributed to the big jump in the cost of eating during the first six months of the year.

Free Ferries Urged By Newfoundland MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Newfoundland Liberal MP Dave Rooney said Wednesday he has proposed that the transport department eliminate fares on ferries from Nova Scotia to Newfoundland because tourists are staying away in droves.

In a memorandum to Transport Minister Otto Lang, the MP for Bonavista-Trinity-Conception blamed hard times in the Newfoundland tourist industry on high vehicle and passenger fares on the Canadian National ferry service from North Sydney, N.S. to Port-aux-Basques, Nfld.

Last year the federal government spent $48.9 million subsidizing this ferry service. Revenues from fares totalled $8.8 million, covering 16 per cent of the cost of operating the ferries.

Rooney argued that the $8.8 million that would be lost if fares were eliminated could easily be raised in tax revenues through the millions of dollars additional tourists would spend if their trip to the province was free.

He estimated that over three years the number Newfoundlanders currently employed by the tourist industry — 3,500 — would double, reducing unemployment insurance pay and welfare costs.

EDC Provides $270M In Aid for Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — The Export Development Corporation, a federal agency which provides help to support sales by Canadian exporters, has approved long-term loans, investment guarantees and insurance totalling $270 million to back sales valued at $339 million to 11 countries.

The agency said today it could not reveal details and names of the firms involved for "commercial confidentiality" reasons but said the sales include motor vehicles, malting products, construction contracts, agricultural products, aircraft, marine engineering services, power transmission installations and steel-making facilities.

The sales are expected to create 6,200 man-years of employment in Canada, the agency said.

The countries involved are Kuwait, Britain, Peru, South Korea, Greece, Jamaica, the U.S., the Soviet Union, Algeria, Morocco and the Philippines.

College Salary Charge 'Unfair'

BURNABY (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer's charge that increasing faculty salaries are responsible for recent tuition fee increases is unfair, Dr. Brian Wilson, a Simon Fraser University administration spokesman, said.

Tuition fees at British Columbia's three public universities — UBC, UVic and Simon Fraser — will increase as much as 35 per cent in September.

McGeer said in the House that Simon Fraser was the "worst performer in B.C." in offering extremely generous settlements to faculty at the expense of the students.

Wilson said that between 1970 and 1977 the salary levels of university professors has just kept pace with increases in the cost of living while rates in industry and among public school teachers have gradually crept ahead of the cost of living.

Crisis Meeting on Nfld. Mill

STEPHENVILLE, Nfld. (CP) — Officials of the union representing 550 employees of a provincial government-owned linerboard mill at Stephenville scheduled to close Aug. 26 are to meet in Ottawa next week with federal officials in an effort to obtain money to keep the operation going.

Dave Callahan, president of Local 1093 of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, said in an interview Tuesday meetings will be held Aug. 12 with the department of regional economic expansion and the department of industry, trade and commerce.

The provincial government announced in its budget this spring that the mill would be closed because it was too expensive to run with linerboard — smooth coating for corrugated cardboard — selling at less than the cost of production.

Premier Frank Moores announced last week that production would halt Aug. 26. About 100 employees would be kept on to mothball the plant's equipment.

Callahan said the mill could be kept operating for an additional $12 million annually for the next three years.

The federal government would be asked at the Ottawa meeting to supply that amount.

Linerboard markets are improving and the mill could be in a profitable position within two or three years, Callahan said.

Brunswick Mining

Despite sluggish world sales and high inventories, Brunswick Mining and Smelting Corp. Ltd. today reported higher earnings for the first six months of this year compared with the similar 1976 period. Net earnings were $5,943,000 or 17.3 cents a share compared with $4,241,000 or 12.4 cents a share for the first six months in 1976. The increase was achieved despite significant cuts in zinc prices. The price reductions resulted in a $2.3 million cut in after tax earnings. The lower zinc prices were offset by higher prices for silver and lead, and also by a lower-priced dollar which makes Canadian goods more competitive abroad.

Mattagami

Mattagami Lake Mines Limited reports consolidated net income for the first half of 1977 of $7,020,000 or $0.53 per share compared with net income of $6,769,000 or $0.51 per share in the first half of 1976.

du Pont (Canada)

Du Pont of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings of $6,200,000 or 78 cents a share for the six months ended June 30, up substantially from $506,000 or five cents a share for the corresponding period last year. Net sales for the period were $269,203,000, up 19 per cent from the $225,724,000 for the first half of 1976. Second quarter net earnings increased to $4,800,000 or 61 cents a share from $217,000 or two cents a share for the second quarter last year. A company statement said higher sales reflected increased shipments for all products except fluorocarbons.

CAE

First quarter consolidated net earnings of CAE Industries Ltd. for the three months ended June 30, 1977, were $839,000, equal to 40 cents per common share, on consolidated revenues of $38,345,000. This compares with earnings of $736,000, or 35 cents per common share, on revenues of $34,230,000 in the first quarter of the prior year. Earnings for the year ended March 31, 1977, were $3,688,000, or $1.75 per common share, on revenues of $140,172,000.

BBC Realty

BBC Realty, a real estate investment trust operated by the Bank of British Columbia, reports net profits of $1.75 million for the six months ended June 30, a 19-per-cent increase over the $1.47 million recorded in the comparable period a year ago. Gross revenue for the period totalled $6.03 million, up from $5.06 million. Second quarter earnings were $917,843 or 45 cents per trust unit. Trevor Pilley, company president, said a dividend of 43 cents a trust unit was declared payable Wednesday to unit holders of record on June 30.

Western Mines

Western Mines Ltd. reports earnings in the first half of 1977 more than doubled to $666,610, or 12 cents a share, compared with $309,674, or 6 cents a share, in the corresponding period last year. Sales for the six months ended June 30 were $8.3 million compared with $8.52 million in 1976. The increase in earnings was partly due to higher silver and lead prices, Western said in a news release, although these were offset somewhat by lower zinc prices, lower ore grades, and higher production costs. The primary reason for the increase was the lower value of the Canadian dollar in relation to the U.S. dollar, Western said.

Brenda Mines

Brenda Mines Ltd. reports net earnings of $4,660,000 or $1.09 a share for the first six months of 1977, up from $1,919,000 or 45c a share during the same period last year. Sales for the first half of 1977 rose to $25,520,000, up from $18,496,000 last year. In a news release, a company spokesman said copper markets remain weak, while the price and demand for molybdenum is strong, accounting for 57 per cent of the company's revenue to date this year.

Customs Brokerage Sold

VANCOUVER (CP) — Control of one of Vancouver's oldest customs brokerages, Leith and Dyke Ltd., has been sold to Import Customs Brokers of Toronto.

Fred Smith and Roy Johnston, two of Leith and Dyke's three shareholders, sold their holdings, while John Duffield retained his share, said Johnston.

Duffield, who was vice-president, will become president of Leith and Dyke, while Johnston will continue as chairman.

Johnston said the shift in control will not result in any policy changes, but it will enable Import Customs to eventually become a national brokerage.

Leith and Dyke, founded in the early 1900s and the largest customs brokerage west of Toronto, was not for sale, said Johnston, but Import Customs made an offer "and the price was right."

He did not reveal the price.

Raven's Favourites #1

French Onion Soup (Dinner only).

French Onion Soup was first introduced in Paris in 1902, and our chef has preserved this famous recipe in his private collection.

We serve it to you very hot...with lots of onions. The puffy delicately flavoured crust of mozarella cheese melts on the outside of the stoneware crock when baked in the oven.

Delicious...with just a touch of sweetness.

Many have acclaimed it the best in town. Some have even said that it equals that of certain famous restaurants in France itself...

Ivan Thompson scored a magnificient six goals as Victoria Shamrocks gave Coquitlam Adanacs a playing lesson Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association semi-final playoff series at Memorial Arena.

And the reaction of the rival coaches to the Shamrocks' 17-7 victory was predictable.

Coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks said it was a culmination of hard work and a continuation of the fine defence the team had been playing for the past three weeks.

"The defence was superb," he said. "Thompson just had an outstanding game. Chris Hall was tremendous when we were shorthanded, and Larry Smeltzer was just great."

Those are the Rocks Dillon singled out for special attention, but he also praised the club for "a fine team effort."

Bob Salt of Coquitlam naturally was disappointed.

"We had our chances early," he said. "But we couldn't score. We had three or four excellent chances in the first few minutes and if we had scored then it might have made a difference. But we didn't.

"Thompson played well," he added, "and so did Smeltzer. He kept them in the game early."

Then he cautioned: "but, we'll be back."

For Thompson, it was a personal playoff best, and the best for a Shamrock since Larry Booth twice turned in a six-goal trick several years ago.

Last year, for instance, Thompson only scored three goals in six playoff games.

It was Thompson's finest hour, coming as it did in the playoffs. But he had served notice earlier he was ready. He scored five goals and had four assists against Burrards here last week and he duplicated that performance against Nanaimo on Saturday, giving him a total of 26 points in his last three games.

Two of his goals came with the Shamrocks short-handed. Two were within 39 seconds of one another at the end of the second period to give the Irish an 11-3 lead at the time.

The Rocks led 4-1 after one period and it was Thompson's first short-handed goal that got them started. His four goals in the second period equalled a WLA record.

Smeltzer earned his moments of glory when he stopped the Adanacs cold for 27 minutes and 45 seconds after Randy Bryan had opened the scoring for the visitors at 3:19 of the first period. It wasn't until 11:04 of the second when Mark Valastin, the pick the Adanacs, beat him again.

Smeltzer stopped 50 shots compared to 32 saves by the combination of Greg Thomas and John Lewis for Coquitlam.

Hall came back into his own with a stellar defensive performance and scored two goals and had three assists.

Norm Baker also scored a pair as did Dan Green while singles went to Charn Dhillon, Dave Lowden, Terry Sanderson, Dave Thomson and Ron MacNeil.

Larry Bell had four assists.

Dillon said "it will be tougher in Coquitlam Saturday. They play more agressively at home." And that seemed strange as the Adanacs were far more agressive in this game than the Irish.

But the Shamrocks had the tighter defence. And this is part of the Dillon master plan.

"Last year, I figured we went a little stale in the playoffs," Dillon said. "So, this year I didn't push them as hard early. But I really started to push in the last month and I think we are in fine shape.

"I have only one thing in mind," he added. "That's getting to the Mann Cup. And we practice Friday."

. . . About Major Hike And Willie 'The Shoe'

It was sort of a busman's holiday in a way — there had to be a stop-off at Exhibition Park, a chance visit to Longacres and, naturally, another look at the Kingdome and Seattle's contribution to the American Baseball League — the Mariners.

But first things first, and the couple in the ferry line about three weeks ago, was George and Nonie Harknett, who otherwise may be recalled by the racing set as owners of the four-year-old filly Major Hike.

The reason was the Cover Girl Stakes at Ex-Park and Major Hike was about to do what she hadn't been able to do all of last year — beat her old nemesis, Title Victory. The Harknetts were en route to see the job done.

And it was a first for several reasons.

It was the first Ex-Park Stakes win for the Harknetts, the first for apprentice jockey Dale Manning, and the first for Victoria trainer Wayne Isbister. Last fall, Major Hike won at Sandown and before that, in other years, George had won feature events on the Island. But a stakes win at Vancouver — that was the ultimate.

Actually, it was all part of the Harknett plan. George had mapped out the strategy after last fall's Sandown meet and hadn't put Major Hike in training until March.

There had been two allowance victories earlier and then the charge from behind to overtake Title Victory in the run to the wire and win by a length and a little.

Naturally, there is more ahead.

Major Hike was purchased from Jack Diamond in the spring of last year for $6,000 and has been money in the bank ever since.

Then, of course, there was the appearance at Ex-Park the very next week of that marvellous little man, Willie Shoemaker.

All 98 pounds and size one and one-half shoes, Shoemaker came north from Hollywood Park to ride a pair of winners and give Ex-Park a Monday night million-dollar handle which was about $369,634 more than passed through the mutuels the corresponding night a year earlier.

The fans were lined up six deep along the rail to get a look at their hero for the night, the winner of more races than any other rider and with nobody close to usurping that honor in the immediate future.

Shoemaker broke his maiden at Golden Gate Fields in 1949 and since then has taken out of racing 10 per cent of the $63 million in purses he's won. Now he's putting something back in the game.

The week before appearing at Ex-Park he rode at Rockingham Park during an off-day from Hollywood and the play was up by 44 per cent.

That's what the magic of his name does for the sport. And, the day after being in Vancouver, the "Shoe" was due to ride an elephant in a charity parade in Los Angeles. There is no record how he made out in that challenge. But no matter, when he romped down in front on River of Ice and Halfers at Ex-Park that made it victories No. 7,251 and 7,252 and he hasn't stopped since.

It was a pleasure to agree at the mutuels.

Longacres was just a passing fancy, thank goodness, and the Kingdome is all it was expected to be even if the Mariners aren't exactly the scourge of the league.

Their biggest trouble is that they win more on the road than they do at home.

The big story back then was that the Mariners had moved out of the cellar to allow Oakland in and a sweep over the Angels would have moved them up one niche higher.

It didn't happen. But then they weren't the only losers that day as the Angels swept a pair and then the series the following night.

I missed a new truck by one seat in the between-games draw. So what's $4,000 compared to a baseball game?

PRONOVOST TO COACH RED WINGS

Rene Marcel Pronovost, veteran of the National Hockey League for 21 years, was named Wednesday as head coach of the Buffalo Sabres.

He is the fourth head coach in the seven-year history of the club.

Two other NHL coaches are expected to be named today.

Ron Stewart is reported ready to pick up the reins of the Los Angeles Kings and former defenceman Leo Boivin was named as the most likely candidate to coach St. Louis Blues.

Richest Bonspiel

EDMONTON (CP) — The richest bonspiel in curling history, the $50,000 World Open Tournament of Champions, will be staged here Oct. 20-25.

A news conference was told Wednesday that several European teams, including world champion Ragnar Kamp of Sweden, are expected to attend.

Lions in Front

CALGARY (CP) — British Columbia Lions move into first place in Western Football Conference standings after defeating Calgary Stampeders 30-26 in last-minute heroics Wednesday night.

The Lions were behind 23-26 with less than three minutes remaining when quarterback Jerry Tagge marched 83 yards in 11 plays to obtain their third victory in four starts.

The winning touchdown, at 14:42 of the fourth quarter, came from a 19-yard pass from Tagge to Al Charuk.

Willie Burden scored three touchdowns for the Stampeders. His third touchdown, a three-yard run at 12:14 of the last quarter, gave Calgary a short-lived 24-23 lead. It was followed by a two-point conversion on a pass from quarterback John Hufnagel to Rudy Linterman.

"I thought we had it," Calgary coach Jack Gotta said referring to Calgary's brief moment of glory and the excitement of 25,568 fans.

It was the second regular-season meeting between the two WFC clubs. British Columbia won the first game 14-8 in Vancouver July 2.

The win gave the Lions a 3-1 record. Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers are tied at second place, each with two wins and a loss. Calgary and Saskatchewan Roughriders have identical 1-3 records.

Lui Passaglia contributed 12 points to the Lions, kicking field goals of 39, 34 and 14 yards and adding three converts.

Mike Strickland on a 13-yard run and Jimmy Young on an 11-yard pass from Tagge completed the Lions' scoring.

Burden's two earlier touchdowns came on a 38-yard pass-andrun combination and a seven-yard pass fram Hufnagel.

Cyril McFall booted two converts and two singles. Calgary also got two points on safety touch in the third quarter. The Lions had started deep in its end and Tagge had attempted to evade Calgary's defensive end John Helton as he unloaded—and was ruled for intentionally grounding the ball.

Calgary's two fumbles in the first half proved costly.

Toward the end of the first quarter, Calgary backs Robin Harber and Scott Crawford collided with each other on a Passaglia punt and the ball was recovered by B.C. at the Calgary 41. That fumble recovery led to Strickland's touchdown early in the second quarter.

After Strickland's touchdown, Calgary marched down the field but former Lion Lou Harris fumbled at the B.C. 32 and Grady Cavness recovered. Five plays later, Tagge tossed to Young for the Lions' second touchdown.

B.C.'s final touchdown was set up after Rockly Long ran 35 yards to return Linterman's 73-yard kickoff. Tagge then used a series of short passes to Terry Bailey, Charuk, Young and Richard Appleby before hitting Charuk with the winner.

Statistically the Stampeders outdid the Lions. The Stampeders had 432 yards of net offence, 72 of them on the ground. The Lions had 259 yards of net offence, 77 of them by rushing.

Tagge was good on 20 of 30 strikes with Charuk making 59 yards on five catches. Appleby was second with 49 yards on three receptions. Strickland was B.C.'s top ground gainer with 66 yards on 18 carries.

Riders' Razzle Dazzles Argos

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders served notice Wednesday night that they don't intend to relinquish the Grey Cup easily as they rolled over Toronto Argonauts 41-11 in an Eastern Football Conference game.

And all it took was fundamental football, head coach George Brancato said. "We didn't do anything new except block and tackle."

The usually conservative Riders also used some razzle-dazzle on the Argos, including four short kickoffs in the first quarter, as they rolled to a 28-0 lead with four consecutive touchdowns.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill said the short kickoffs startled the Argos. "We were 21 points down before we knew we were in a football game."

But the Argos, who surprised the Riders 17-1 in Toronto last week, will be back, Cahill said over his shoulder as he bolted from an interview room. "And Brancato better know it."

The loss last week ignited harsh words from Ottawa management and fans, and several lineup changes were made in hopes of stirring up the defending Grey Cup champs.

Brancato said he yelled and screamed all week in practice. "Maybe that helped."

Quarterback Tom Clements, who threw three touchdown passes and handed off for two more major scores, said the improved Rider performance was the result of adjusting for the strong Toronto defensive blitz.

Picken Produces Surprise

OTTAWA (CP — Eight winners in Wednesday's third round of men's singles competition were starting to quarter-final play today in the Canadian national tennis championships held this year at the Rideau Lawn Tennis Club.

Vancouver's 10th seeded John Picken pulled a surprise win over fourth-seeded former Victorian Don McCormick of Vancouver 6-7, 7-5, 6-3. Toronto's Dave Brown defeated Mike Puc of London, Ont., 6-2, 6-2, and in a marathon three-hour set, Toronto's Dale Power beat Montreal's Francois Synaeghel 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

On the women's side, top-seeded Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa beat Toronto's Sally Coles 6-2, 7-5 in the second round of singles play.

Montreal's Andree Martin beat Oakville's Judy Pridham 6-1, 6-0. Another Montrealer, Nicole Marois, defeated Vancouver's Gabrielle Slezakova 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

How Good Is Peter Szmidt?

MONTREAL (CP) — The sky may be the limit for 15-year-old Peter Szmidt, even if he still surprises himself by what he does in a swimming pool.

Szmidt thrilled the crowd at the Canadian swimming championships Wednesday night by winning the 400-metre freestyle final in Canadian record time of three minutes, 5.585 seconds, erasing the old mark of 4:00.14 held by Stephen Badger of Winnipeg.

"My coach (Dave Johnson) told me that's what I had to do, but I didn't think I could do it," the Pointe Claire, Que., teenager said. "I'm just so surprised I don't know what to say."

Not only did Szmidt win, but he did it the hard way. He was seventh after the first 50 metres, but closed the gap relentlessly and pulled alongside the leader—American Olympic star Mike Bruner—midway through the final lap of the Olympic Pool.

Szmidt, a strapping six-footer, just touched first while Bruner—gold medallist in the 200-metre butterfly at the Olympics last year—came in second in 3:58.63.

"I didn't think I could come back from seventh," the Pointe Claire swimmer said. "And I didn't think I could catch him (Bruner)."

Johnson, however, was more generous in evaluating his protegee's talent.

"He's a very modest person," Johnson said. "It's just a question of time before he is down around world record time."

"There was a day when a Canadian male swimmer wouldn't want to race against a guy like Bruner. But we've got guys like Szmidt coming up who are going to be in line for gold at Moscow."

The only other Canadian record Wednesday was set by Steve Pickell, 20, of Vancouver who took the men's 100-metre backstroke in 57.36 to better his old mark of 57.58. The Vancouver swimmer's time was also the fastest in the world this year.

Graham Smith, 19, of Edmonton also recorded the fastest time in the world this year for the 200-metre breaststroke— 2:20.35—but his winning effort was shy of his own Canadian record of 2:19.42.

Other individual winners Wednesday included Shannon Smith, 15, of New Westminster, B.C., who won the women's 400 freestyle in 4:15.81 and Cheryl Gibson, 18, of Edmonton, who took the women's 100-metre backstroke in 1:04.22.

Christina Hodson, 15, of Ottawa took the measure of a slow field in the women's 200 breaststroke, winning in 2:40.42.

The Olympium Club of Etobicoke in Toronto won the women's 800-metre freestyle relay in 8:28.45 while the Canadian Dolphins of Vancouver took the men's 800 relay in Canadian record time of 7:45.11, bettering their own mark of 7:46.72.

Meanwhile, association officials have unveiled a plan to divide the national team into men's and women's units, each with its own head coach, in time for next year's Commonwealth Games in Edmonton and world championships in Berlin.

Past Champs Gain Tennis Semi-Final

max low

Two seasoned campaigners, one player making her first appearance and a girl who didn't even want to enter make up the women's singles semi-final field in the fourth annual Victoria Times Public Parks tennis tournament.

The women's event is the second of five to reach the semi-final stage in the summer-long tourney, which winds up with all semis on Saturday, Aug. 20, and the finals on Sunday, Aug. 21. The last four left from a starting field of 32 are:

ELVIRA KAPUS — Born in Hungary where she was several times a provincial champion, she won the Times Public Parks title two years ago. She didn't defend her title last year because she was expecting a baby.

KATHY GRAHAM — Junior girls' singles champion last year, she hadn't intended to enter the women's event but agreed to give it a try after we had to reject her entry for the girls' competition (she failed to make the under-18 cut-off date by a mere 12 days).

PEGGY GLEGG — Making her third appearance in the semis in three years, she is an excellent all-round player who was born in Barbados. Two years ago, Peggy lost a three-set thriller to Elvira Kapus in the semi-finals, and last year she defeated former champion Liz-Anne Ogden in the final to win the title.

MARGE GRAINGER — Playing for the first time in the Times tourney, she has done well in a tough field. Marge is out of town at the moment taking a course but will be back in time for the semi-finals. Mrs. Grainger (we'll have more on her later) and her husband Doug are also through to the quarter-finals of the mixed doubles.

The semi-final lineup has Elvira playing Kathy and Peggy versus Marge.

Defending champions Joe Hammond and Laurie Blay are among the other seven pairs through to the mixed doubles quarter-finals.

Foster's 36th Home Run All-Time Best for Sparky

By The Associated Press

Sparky Anderson has been in baseball 25 years and he's seen his share of home runs, but George Foster still makes him wonder.

"I've never seen a ball hit like that, never," said Anderson, the sight of Foster's eighth-inning blast fresh in his mind following Cincinnati Reds 5-3, 10-inning victory over Chicago Cubs in a National League baseball game Wednesday night.

"That's my all-time all-time," added Anderson, who estimated at 550 feet the shot hit off Cubs reliever Willie Hernandez.

The ball jumped off Foster's bat like a shot and headed down the left-field line on a steady rise. It was still rising when it landed to the right of the foul line, in the third row of the third tier at Riverfront Stadium—the red seats, which have been reached only five times in the eight years the stadium has been in use.

In other National League games, Montreal Expos beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2, Philadelphia Phillies beat San Diego Padres 8-1, Houston Astros blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0, New York Mets edged Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 14 innings and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Foster's home run was his 36th of the season and gave him 105 runs batted in—tops in the majors in both categories. It tied the score at 3-3 and Dan Driessen cracked a two-run homer in the 10th to win it.

Lee Mazzilli's pinch single in the 14th gave the Mets their victory over the Dodgers in a marathon which twice was delayed by rain for a total of nearly two hours and took over 5½ hours in all. The Mets sent it into extra innings with two runs after two were out in the bottom of the ninth. Doug Flynn drew a bases-loaded walk off rookie Lance Rautzhan to force home the tying run.

Meanwhile in the American League, Fernando Arroyo fell victim to his own intuition.

"I felt good warming up and felt like I would have a good game," said the Detroit pitcher who lasted only five batters Wednesday night as Minnesota Twins ripped into him for four runs on a walk, two singles and two doubles en route to an 11-1 win over the Tigers.

In other American League games Kansas City Royals downed Toronto Blue Jays 7-4, Texas Rangers outlasted Chicago White Sox 12-10 in 12 innings, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland Indians 7-4, Boston Red Sox belted Seattle Mariners 12-4, Baltimore Orioles beat Oakland A's 8-6 in 10 innings and California Angels got past New York Yankees 5-3.

Farmers, Greaves Meet in Playoff

Farmer Construction scored 10 runs in the fifth inning and bashed 17 hits over-all Wednesday to defeat Greaves Movers 15-3 in the final regular season game of the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League at Lambrick Park.

The result left the two teams, which meet in a best-of-three playoff semi-final series starting Tuesday, in a deadlock for second place. League-champion Gorge Hotel receives a bye into the final.

Bob Mabee led Farmer batting with two singles and two doubles in four trips to the plate to score three runs and drive in a pair. Wayne Krimmer was two-for-four to score once and drive in two runs while Terry Armstrong was three-for-five and scored twice.

Cougars Set Schedule

The Western Canada Hockey League has decided to stay with last season's allotment of one over-age player for the 1977-78 season but Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe plans "to wait a while" before deciding if he will take advantage of the rule.

Some WCHL operators pressed for an allowance of up to four over-age players but governors voted on the one man at last month's annual general meeting.

Shupe said Wednesday that graduating goaltender Murray Bannerman would have been a logical candidate. Since he has signed a pro contract with Vancouver Canucks, who made Bannerman their fifth draft pick, it's not very likely he would be available.

Over-age players do not necessarily have to be graduates of the team that signs them.

"I might not sign one," said Shupe, "but on the other hand if some over-age player can help us greatly as the season goes along, then I'll consider signing him. At the moment, there's no hurry . . ."

Shupe, taking over from Pat Ginnell as Victoria's coach, says he is "pleased" with Cougars' 1977-78 schedule.

Cougars are faced with only two extended road trips. Victoria's first big jaunt, calling for eight games in 11 days, will come in early October. Cougars will play nine games in 18 days in the second half of the schedule.

Cougars will play 40 games against their three Western Division rivals and another 32 games (two home and two away) against clubs in the Eastern and Central Divins.

The majority of Victoria home games will be played Saturdays and Tuesdays.

Cougars, who will launch their regular training camp on Sept. 6, also will play at least six exhibition games, including two in Memorial Arena.

The exhibition schedule may be extended to seven games because of a request this week from New Westminster Bruins for an extra meeting on the Island.

The Cougar schedule:

Jimmy Continues Winning Ways

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors made short work of 19-year-old Werner Zirngibl of West Germany on Wednesday, winning 7-6, 6-0 in the second round of a $125,000 international tennis tournament.

In other second-round action, seventh-seeded Stan Smith lost to 25-year-old Terry Moor of Monroe, La., 7-6, 6-3.

KEEGAN PRODUCES FOR HIS NEW CLUB

HAMBURG, West Germany (Reuter) — Kevin Keegan led SV Hamburg to a 3-2 win over his former club Liverpool in an international soccer match Wednesday night.

SV Hamburg led 1-0 in the first half against the English League First Division team when Keegan scored in the 19th minute before 55,000 fans. Hamburg paid Liverpool, last season's European Cup champions, more than $900,000 for Keegan.

In the 63rd minute, Keegan passed to Magath, whose harmless shot slipped through the hands of England goalkeeper Ray Clemence to make it 2-0 for the 1976 winners of the European Cup Winners' Cup.

But Liverpool rallied and tied the score on goals by David Johnson and David Fairclough in the 65th and 69th minutes respectively.

Angels Capture Playoff Laurels

Tammy Painter came up with three hits — a triple and two singles — to lead CRESC Angeles to a 7-2 victory over GSV Combos and a sweep of the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League playoff final at Hyacinth Park.

Angels opened the series Tuesday with an 8-7 win over the league champons.

Sharleen Eden and Gale Prince each added two hits to the Angeles' attack and Cathy Wilkinson hurled a four-hitter to pick up the pitching victory.

In consolation semi-final games, Noreen Alexander smashed a grand-slam home run to help Hygrade Radio to a 15-3 win over Butler Brothers and Ingraham Hotel tripped Victoria Athletics, 8-4.

At Central Park, cellar-dwelling Juan de Fuca Builders eliminated Ingraham Hotel from playoff contention with a 5-3 upset victory in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League.

The loss by Ingraham gave Seaboard Construction fourth place and the final playoff berth. Playoffs, which will also include Sooke Merchants, Victoria Athletics and Colony Inn, get underway Aug. 11.

Four base hits and two opposition errors helped Juan de Fuca come up with a four-run fourth inning for the victory.

Larry Cole struck out 11 batters while allowing only two hits and two walks to earn the pitching triumph.

In Sidney Men's League play, Harvey's Sporting Goods edged Travelodge 5-4 in the opener of a best-of-three semi-final series at Sanscha Park.

Mike Nunn blasted a two-run homer in the fifth inning to grase a 4-3 deficit.

Seaboard Properties and Sidney Hotel, which leads 1-0, continue their semi series tonight at 6:30 at the same site.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Remco Office Systems bounced last-place Esquimalt Ocean Cement 11-0 in a Heywood Men's League tussle.

Lovell, Strong Take Top Cycling Honors

EDMONTON (CP) — Jocelyn Lovell, 26, of Toronto, and Karen Strong, 23, of St. Catharines were best-over-all and led Ontario to 21 of 42 medals at the Canadian national cycling championships, which concluded Wednesday.

Lovell, a competitor at the Montreal Olympics in 1976, continued to dominate Canadian cycling with wins in the one kilometre time trial, the 10-mile scratch race and the madison race. He also picked up a second in the individual sprint to win a gold in the omnium, awarded to best competitors in track events.

Strong set two records—one with 1:17.68 in the 1,000-metre time trial, erasing a 1:17.9 set by Winnipeg's Sylvia Burka and another with 4:02.94 in the 3,000-metre individual pursuit, knocking almost 20 seconds off her old record of 4:22.30. She was also awarded the gold in the women's omnium and a silver in the 39-mile road race race.

Hugh Walton, 23, of Toronto, who teamed with Lovell in the madison, also picked up silvers in the 10-mile and the 117-mile road race.

Gord Singleton, 21, of Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada's premier sprinter, won a gold medal in his specialty when defending champion Lovell was disqualified in the second heat of their best-of-three final. Singleton had won the first heat in 11:75.

Ontario won a gold in the 4,000-metre team pursuit.

Other gold medal winners included Peggy Bailey, 20, of Calgary, women's individual sprint; Ron Hayman, 22, of Vancouver, men's road race; Burka, women's road race; Jim Keast, 4,000-metre individual pursuit and Quebec in the 100-kilometre team time trial by edging B.C.

Hayman, John Smith of Victoria, Keast of Port Coquitlam and John Warnock of Vancouver made up the B.C. team.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old man facing a charge of attempted robbery with threats of violence was remanded in custody Wednesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge Blake Allan.

Michael Dayid Filipchuk, who lives at the Salvation Army hostel at 521 Johnson, was charged in connection with an abortive, noon-hour holdup at the Toronto-Dominion Bank, 630 Yates, on Tuesday.

Insp. Angus Stewart, head of the detective division, said the attempt occurred at about 12:35 p.m. and was foiled when a woman teller left the would-be robber standing there as she walked over to another teller to inform her of what was happening. The second teller then walked into the manager's office to notify him of the holdup and a phone call was placed to Victoria city police.

By the time police arrived the man had departed but the suspect was arrested less than five hours later after police photos were shown to the first teller.

Filipchuk was remanded without plea until Friday for election of his trial method and a possible bail hearing. Crown counsel Robert Mulligan also informed the court he would seek psychiatric assessment by a forensic psychiatrist before Filipchuk's next appearance in court.

A Sidney man was fined $150 for towing a water-skier without a second person being in the boat.

Stan Callins, 27, of 9927 7th Street, pleaded guilty and court was told he was seen by Sidney RCMP towing a water-skier in Deep Cove on June 13 without someone acting as lookout in the boat.

Thomas Phillip Henry, 20, of 2923 West Saanich Road, was fined on one conviction of driving while suspended and given a jail term for the second conviction.

Court was told Henry was stopped by Central Saanich police March 12 and handed a 24-hour roadside suspension. A taxi was called by police and Henry ordered the taxi to take him to the Prairie Inn nearby and then back to the car.

On July 4, Henry was stopped by Saanich police at 1:15 a.m. as he was heading north on the Pat Bay Highway and a check with Motor Vehicle Branch records showed that Henry was suspended from driving for six months at his May 13 conviction for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

Allan levied a $150 fine on the first conviction and sentenced Henry to 21 days in jail for the second offence.

Fined for impaired driving were Allan Fredric Planes, 23, of 1987 Kaltasin, $500; Norman Lyle Campbell, 34, of 2081 Maple Avenue, $500; and Richard Bruce Prior, 20, of HMCS Kootenay, $400.

In addition, Planes was fined $35 for driving without a valid driver's licence.

Gorge Hospital Dispute Meeting on Friday

Union and management at Gorge Road Hospital will meet again Friday in a dispute over staffing which produced a brief walkout last Saturday.

Stewart Fyfe, unit chairman for the Hospital Employees Union unit at the hospital, said Wednesday management did not commit itself to any remedy at a discussion of the issue Tuesday.

"I'm wondering whether they're going to do anything."

At the meeting Friday the hospital administration is to indicate its plans, he said.

Three-quarters of the 400 beds at the hospital are devoted to long-term care of the most elderly chronically ill. One hundred beds are for rehabilitating patients.

About half the staff of 550 are members of the HEU. The dispute involves licensed practical nurses, nurses' aides, orderlies and the housekeeping staff, Fyfe said.

The two-hour "study session" Saturday, which saw about 90 employees gather in the cafeteria, was not union organized but a "spontaneous thing because people were mad, they were being stretched too far," he added.

Vander Zalm Unaware Of Appeal

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says he was not aware or consulted about a decision by British Columbia's superintendent of child welfare to appeal a B.C. Supreme Court ruling which allows police to fingerprint juveniles without their permission.

Victor Belknap said Tuesday the decision will be appealed because he fears the ruling, made July 22 by Mr. Justice John Bouck, will send police on "fishing expeditions" looking for juvenile suspects.

"I personally would not have appealed the decision, and there certainly was no directive from the government," Vander Zalm said in an interview Wednesday night. "He (Belknap) may be initiating the action in his capacity as superintendent of child welfare.

"I did not know he was involved, and I was not aware or even consulted on the matter."

Belknap had said that police who suspect a local gang of juveniles are responsible for a crime will fingerprint them all, hoping that a set of prints match those taken at the scene of the crime.

"I have sufficient confidence in the police, despite a little bit of bad publicity recently, that they will not go out and arrest individuals or groups unless they have reason to do so," Vander Zalm said.

He added that he regrets "any statement, made by any government official — elected or appointed — which would give people the impression that our police would act irresponsibly."

MYSTERY ILLNESS HITS SCOUTS

BUTLER, Pa. (UPI) — A flu-like illness has affected some 66 Los Angeles area scouts attending the 1977 National Scout Jamboree at nearby Moraine State Park. However, all but 30 of the scouts have been released from medical supervision.

Dr. Robert Lynn, medical director at the encampment for 28,500 scouts, issued the following statement late Wednesday.

"We believe it is a reovirus, probably self-limiting in its nature and similar to a 24-hour flu," he said. "Exposure has been limited to some 300 scouts in a single tour group that left Los Angeles on July 25.

Russian Fishing Fleet Linked To Soviet Spies in Halifax: MP

HALIFAX (CP) — Radio Station CHNS says the Canadian military has established that at least 10 to 15 per cent of the Soviet fishing fleet is involved in gathering intelligence.

The station also says two Soviet fishing officers living in Halifax are co-ordinating the North Atlantic activities of the fleet.

Volkov, in an interview, strongly denied he is involved in any intelligence work.

"It's absolutely not correct," he said. "We have nothing to do with this . . . I have nothing to do with these operations."

Mike Forrestall, former parliamentary defence critic, said in an interview with the station that Klatnoy is the commander and is in the military.

"This to me is spying," said Forrestall. "That's simply the word for it. It's not uncommon."

Forrestall, referring to an earlier incident in Ottawa when Soviet citizens were asked to leave Canada, said:

"They were doing exactly the same thing as I suspect these people are doing. They're monitoring our military . . . and probably co-ordinating the surveillance monitoring activity that is going on every day just off our coast."

CHNS says RCMP here are watching the two men.

Retired Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle, asked why the Soviet Union was interested in Halifax, said:

"There's a great deal of concerned information passing through Halifax every day in addition to the comings and goings of our warships, the communications to and from those warships, the codes that they use, the knowledge that the sailors have and a loose person talking ashore. A little bit of information becomes a part of the complete fabric."

THEY'LL HUNT SON OF SAM FOR FREE

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 200 police officers have volunteered to hunt for the psychopathic killer who calls himself "Son of Sam" on their off-duty time without pay.

There already are 300 officers searching for the killer.

Police said they still do not have any new leads as to the identity of the gunman who has used a .44 caliber Bulldog revolver to kill six young persons and wound seven others over the past year.

The department sent written notices to all police commanders informing them that any officers wishing to work voluntarily on the case should contact commanders in the areas they want to patrol.

9,000 Canadians Working in U.S.

BUFFALO (AP) — At a time when United States unemployment is more than seven per cent, about 9,000 Canadians are crossing the border each day to go to their jobs.

That is 20 times the number of Americans allowed to work in Canada, and some labor leaders here object to the Canadian commuters.

"I think maybe we are too lax, we've been the nice guy. There's too many out of work now," said George Wessel, president of the Buffalo Council of the AFL-CIO.

"If the jobs are available, we allow them to work, but try to work in Canada — you need an act of God," Wessel said.

About 9,000 Canadians hold permits to work south of the border, the U.S. immigration service says.

Government officials in Ottawa said Wednesday that 406 U.S. citizens hold permits to work in Canada.

"It's not fair. I think it's time we did something about it," said Wessel.

Other economic observers here are not so upset over the Canadians who hold permits to cross the three bridges spanning the Niagara River to go to jobs in Erie and Niagara counties.

"If those jobs were transferred to Americans, it would account for a 2-per-cent drop in the local unemployment rate, which isn't really significant," said George Smyntek, a senior economist with the New York state department of labor.

"I'm pretty sure that, where they have permits, the skills aren't available here," Smyntek added.

U.S. Told Cuba Raid Planned

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States has supplied Cuba with intelligence information about possible terrorist acts against the country, the state department said Wednesday.

Department spokesman John Trattner was responding to questions about a report by a Miami television station, WTVJ, Tuesday night that a group of Cuban exiles there had planned a major attack on Cuban shipping and possibly the island itself in June.

The TV station said the raid was cancelled when its leaders found out the United States had informed Cuba about it during talks at the United Nations and because of bad weather.

Trattner would not confirm the report, but said: "We have exchanged information with the Cuban government on possible terrorist acts and we do that in such a way as to be sure there is no compromise of sources of our information.

"Obviously, because this is a matter of some sensitivity, I am not able to go beyond that."

The spokesman declined to say what, if any, information the United States received from Cuba in return.

He described the exchanges as recent but gave no other time element for them.

In June, in an unusual flurry of such activity, Cuban authorities seized six U.S. fishing vessels in waters between the two countries. A number of other boats were also seized last month.

In April, Cuba allowed an anti-hijacking agreement with the United States to expire largely because it alleged Washington had not lived up to its commitment in the agreement to curb the activities of Cuban exile groups in the country.

Last October, Cuba accused the CIA of working closely with anti-Castro exile groups and of being involved in the fatal crash of a Cuban airliner off Barbados earlier that month in which 73 people died.

But relations between the two countries have since improved. In late April, they signed an agreement on fisheries and maritime boundaries and next month will open diplomatic "interest sections" in each other's capitals to end 16 years of severed relations.

STORRIER

Panorama Leisure Centre Open

Recreational programs are now available to all residents of the northern Saanich Peninsula with the opening Tuesday of the capital region's newest sports centre on Forest Park Drive, just off East Saanich Road.

The Panorama Leisure Centre has a six-lane, 25-metre pool, a 30 by 15 feet learners' pool, whirlpool and sauna.

It also has an 85 by 200 feet ice surface with seating for 700, plus a multi-use area and dresssing rooms.

The centre, financed by the people of Sidney and North Saanich, was designed and constructed by Keyward Industries.

"We got our money's worth," said Brian Storrier, manager, "The contractors gave us a real, fine package."

He said the building has been designed so that it can be expanded if the need for more recreational facilities arises.

No decision has been made on opening a cocktail lounge in the centre.

Storrier said swimming programs are available for adults, senior citizens, teenagers and the handicapped.

"Later on we will have a program for our ice surface — figure skating, recreational skating and minor hockey," he added. "When the rink is not is use, it can be rented out for boat shows, bingo and other activities."

'HUMILIATING' ADS NO LONGER NEEDED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The makers of Listerine must tell the world their mouthwash does not combat colds or sore throats — but they needn't say their ads have been misleading.

That was the finding of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here, which Tuesday upheld a government order that Warner-Lambert Co. must run "corrective advertising" to counter past claims the mouthwash helps fight colds.

But the court doesn't think there's any reason to "humiliate" the manufacturers, since they seem to have acted in good faith. So it decreed that future ads need not include the phrase, "contrary to prior advertising," as ordered by the Federal Trade Commission.

The FTC directed Warner-Lambert in 1975 to stop advertising that Listerine prevents, cures or alleviates the common cold.

It also required that the next $10 million in ads state: "Contrary to prior advertising, Listerine will not help prevent colds or sore throats or lessen their severity."

Chances 'Favorable' For U.S. Recovery

WASHINGTON (WP) — Prospects for a sustained U.S. economic recovery through mid-1978 were rated "favorable" Wednesday, but the outlook for inflation is "less comforting," according to the annual review of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

The OECD urged not only anti-inflation measures, but "additional selective action" to reduce unemployment among persons, and to stimulate additional business investment.

Meanwhile, the report predicted that the U.S. trade and current account deficits would worsen, but suggested that this was a proper posture for the U.S. in present circumstances. Red ink in the trade account was estimated at about $25 billion this year, while the current account deficit was forecast at "around $14 billion" in 1977, with little change in the rate in the first half of 1978.

"From an international point of view" the report said, "it is desirable that the United States, together with other better-placed countries, should continue to lead world recovery, and that the U.S. current external account should remain in deficit for some time to come."

The North American Intercollegiate Pair Championships held this past April were captured by Alan Heubert and Marty Fleisher, both of Teaneck, N.J. They represented Swarthmore College. In second place was Washington University. Harvard University finished in third place.

One of the deals that contributed to Swarthmore's victory was the following. Heubert was sitting in the West seat. Fleisher was East. The hand was played against Purdue University.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

South's one-club bid was artificial and showed 16 or more high-card points. North's one diamond response showed 0.5 high-card points. South's jump to two notrump denoted 21-22 points.

The eight of spades was played on West's opening lead of the deuce, and East made a good play when he followed suit with the five. Had East put up the king, dummy's queen of spades would have become an entry for the cashing of the to-be-established club suit.

South also made a good play when he overtook dummy's eight with his ace. It was South's hope that West was the possessor of the spade king; and that, hence, dummy's queen of spades would serve as an entry to dummy after West's (presumed) king of spades was driven out.

To tricks two and three the ace and queen of clubs were played, West declining to take the club queen with the king. Next came the ten of clubs, West's king winning as East discarded a low heart. West then led the eight of diamonds, which was covered by dummy's nine and East's ten. South took the trick with his ace.

Declarer now led a low spade, hoping that West had the king. West played the ten and dummy's queen was captured by East's king. A spade was returned and West took two more spade tricks. When play had ended, declarer had incurred a three-trick set.

MLAs Wasting Time Nit-Picking, Says Socred

SHELFORD
. . . not satisfied

A Social Credit backbencher suggested Wednesday the government set up a special committee to streamline the work of the legislature.

"I would say at the present time that we're 50 years out of date," Cyril Shelford (Skeena) said during debate on the legislature's budget estimates.

"I'm certainly not satisfied with the way this house is functioning at this time," Shelford said. "I would say, without any chance of being contradicted, that the people out in the country think we're a bunch of idiots at best.

"I would suggest that all members of this house should be taking a hard look at themselves, because if we don't, we'll be destroying the institution which we are in."

Shelford said people say the MLAs are "wasting an awful lot of time nit-picking at each other" when they should be in their constituencies "looking at the problems."

He suggested a four-member committee, one from each party, be set up to prepare terms of reference for a special house committee to consider how to "get the business of the people done more quickly."

He also called on the ministers to try and get around the province "so they can see what's happening," and urged more secretarial help for the MLAs, noting that it sometimes takes up to 10 days between the time a letter is dictated and the time it is sent.

Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) agreed, saying that she has three "nearly full time" secretaries, one of which she pays for herself, "and I still can't keep up with the correspondence."

She also urged the government to provide adequate salaries and pension benefits to the MLAs.

"There should be compensation sufficient so that if a young person enters politics, the years they lose — in terms of seniority in their positions or the command they would hold in their profession, their pension benefits, their advancement benefits, their fringe benefits — shouldn't be a penality, and they are today," Jordan said.

Crown Computer Cost May Double—Levi

The government's planned Crown computer corporation could cost more than double what is currently being paid by the province for computer services, Norm Levi (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) said Wednesday.

Levi told the legislature during second reading debate on the Systems Act he has been told by experts that the B.C. Systems Corp. could cost from $40 million to $50 million dollars a year to run, compared with current expenditures of $22 million a year.

He also said consultants currently working for the government on computer consolidation are "spending money like a lot of drunken sailors."

He blamed the expense on the haste in which the legislation was drawn up, saying the government has never really told the province why the new corporation is necessary.

Levi said it is ironic that the Social Credit government, which claims to be as supporter of private enterprise, is producing legislation that would take business away from the private sector.

He also criticized the government for failing to allow adequate public discussion of a bill which could have far-reaching affects.

"There are issues of civil liberties," Levi said, adding that the corporation provides for such a centralization of data that an individual's privacy could be threatened unless adequate safeguards are in place.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, minister responsible for the bill, opened debate by repeating that the new corporation would eliminate waste in the use by the government of data processing and computer equipment.

Wolfe said the corporation's long-term goal would be to develop improved systems for the provision of information at realistic costs.

The new corporation is expected to employ 300 persons.

AFTER 262 HOURS . . . B.C. BUDGET APPROVED

After 262 hours and 18 minutes of debate, the legislature approved the 1977-78 budget Wednesday — six months before the Social Credit government will present the 1978-79 budget.

Debate on the $3.8 billion budget, presented Jan. 24, was originally limited to 135 hours under rules established during the former NDP administration.

But in June, following a two-month Easter break, the government was forced to lift the restriction when it found that the estimates of only eight of the 18 ministries had been approved before the 135-hour limit.

A Social Credit slogan during the campaign before the December, 1975, general election in which the NDP was defeated, was "not a dime without debate," as the party said there should be no time limits on debate of budget estimates.

Women 'Encouraged'

Labor Minister Allan Williams told the legislature Wednesday his ministry has "taken steps to encourage" women to enter into apprenticeship programs.

He noted that statistics show there now are two women for every three man in the work force.

"I hope that more women will examine the trades than have heretofore," he added pointing to the field of radio and television where he said "women are better suited than many men."

Barbara Wallace (NDP—Cowicha-Malahat) applauded the minister's actions, noting that there are no woman apprenticing in the bricklaying, carpentry, ironworking, joinery, line work, machinists, plumbing and refrigeration trades.

"They are still carrying bedpans, pounding typewriters and waiting on you from behind counters," she said.

NEVER URGED BCR LINE CLOSED

Premier Bill Bennett says he's never considered ordering the closure of the B.C. Railway line between Fort Nelson and Fort St. John.

Bennett told the legislature Wednesday that the board of the Crown-owned railway has never recommended such a closure and he has never considered it.

He said as far as he is concerned, the 250-mile line is an operational part of the railway.

Bennett made the statements in answer to questions by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson.

Gibson said Bennett had, through his silence on the controversial line, encouraged rumors it would be closed.

A Royal commission looking into all aspects of the railway was told in June that Fort Nelson-Fort St. John section of the line has had losses of $74 million in six years of operation and also has had 270 derailments in the last two years.

Gibson asked for assurances the line would not be closed, but Bennett would only say that he is not prepared to anticipate any recommendations made by the commission.

Gibson quoted Andrew Schuck, mayor of Fort St. John, who criticized Bennett for his lack of a stand on the issue.

Bennett said that Schuck was an unsuccessful opposition candidate in the last election and suggested that he had political motives for being critical.

Expand Job Plan, Gibson Pleads

The provincial government should be able to provide a job for anyone in the province who wants one, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson told the legislature Wednesday.

Gibson suggested the government expand the Provincial Rehabilitation and Employment Program, established to find jobs for people seeking provincial assistance.

"It is a complete waste when a large number of people want to work but cannot," said Gibson. "Ways have to be found to provide work, and it may mean the overthrow of fixed ideas and philosphies."

He said that "much useful work" could be done by municipalities, school districts and government ministries while providing work for the unemployed.

Labor Minister Allan Williams disagreed, saying it is up to the private sector to create employment and provide jobs.

"The government role is to stimulate that segment of the economy which produces jobs," he said.

The provincial government has created 19,000 summer jobs for students at a cost of $22 million, or an average of $1,200 per job, he said, adding the federal government spends $4,300 per job.

Williams said his government is preparing a submission to the federal government which urges they both focus on the industrial areas which need assistance in creating employment.

Labor College Act Changes Coming

The government is planning changes to the yet-unproclaimed Labor College Act which was approved by the legislature during the NDP administration.

Labor Minister Allan Williams told the legislature Wednesday he had voted for the act though he thought "there were some inadequacies" in the legislation.

He said ministry officials are considering revisions and changes in program approach to the college and "I'm expecting a cabinet submission to be placed on my desk any day now to deal with this subject."

The minister said he thinks the act should be proclaimed because "in the area of industrial relations techniques and education, I think that nothing could be more fundamental and more necessary, at least as much on the side of management as on the side of the trade unions."

JAMES BAY, FAIRFIELD

Branch Libraries Wanted

Instead of committing themselves to more than $400,000 a year in leasing space for a new central library from the provincial government, the four core municipalities should consider building more community-size branch libraries, Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie suggested today.

McKenzie said if there were branches in such communities as James Bay and Fairfield there would be less pressure on the present central library building.

He also said that new technology in the library field, particularly microfilm techniques and computer hook-ups with other, large reference libraries, should be explored to ensure the most efficient use of the present building.

McKenzie's comments at the city finance committee meeting were prompted by a revised proposal from the Greater Victoria Library Board, for leasing space in the new provincial government building under construction at Blanshard and Broughton.

The committee referred the matter for a council-in-committee discussion at next Thursday's regular council meeting.

An earlier GVLB proposal for relocating the central library in the Blanshard-Broughton building was supported by Victoria but rejected by the other three municipal councils.

Its financial terms were less favorable to the municipalities than the present proposal, but McKenzie complained today that city council was rushed into endorsing "this terrific bargain" by a provincially-imposed deadline.

A library board delegation will be invited to address council on the matter next week, and McKenzie indicated he would have a list of questions to put to him.

Aldermen also asked the city comptroller to provide back-up financial data so that the city's present share of library costs can be compared with the operating costs involved in the relocation scheme.

Victoria's representative on the library board and a strong advocate of relocation, Ald. Murray Glazier, was absent on holiday today.

Of the other two aldermen present, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Frank Carson, only Tindall gave any hint that he might be reconsidering his earlier support for the idea.

"I think Ald. McKenzie has raised some valid points here," he said, "and I'm not suggesting that in itself is unusual."

Girl Charged

Victoria police had little trouble making an arrest in an early morning break-in at a downtown restaurant.

A tipster reported to police at 2:40 a.m. there was suspicious movement inside the Shah Jahan restaurant, 1010 Fort.

Seven officers sped to the scene and were taking positions around the building when a suspect came out a door.

A police spokesman said a 17-year-old girl was arrested and charged with breaking and entering with intent. She is to appear in court later.

About $8 was taken from the restaurant and the money was recovered, the spokesman said.

Special Squad Eyed To Fight Arsonists

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons is considering forming a special squad to fight a surge in arson fires in the past two years.

In an interview today, Simmons said the problem is large enough now to warrant establishing a permanent and full-time arson squad comprised initially of one police officer and one fire prevention officer.

He said the proposal, which he described at this stage as "just a germ of an idea" won't be made to Victoria council until budget discussions in February.

He said it would be impossible to implement without more staff. And that would mean an increase in budget.

He estimated such a squad would cost around $50,000 a year taking into account wages, office space, photo supplies and other equipment and materials needed to carry out investigations.

Although the fire department has arson investigators, the four inspectors involved have many other duties and the pressures often relegate arson investigation into a secondary role.

Simmons said, however, fire statistics in recent years indicate arson should have a higher priority and full-time attention.

He said last year arson fires caused more damage than all other fires combined — $626,000 out of $1,172,744.

There were 32 arson fires during the year, more than double the previous year's 13.

This year the number is expected to be higher. Already to the end of July there have been 23 arson fires in the city with losses totalling $253,475.

The increase isn't restricted to Victoria. Simmons said arson is a problem across the country.

"It's a form of violence we're going through right now along with all the other kinds of violence in the world."

He did not feel paid arson occurred often here although it is a major problem in large U.S. cities.

Most of the local arson is "pure vandalism," he said.

"How do you explain a person wandering down the street and setting fires to cars as we had here a short time ago?" the chief asked. "Such a person has got to be mentally upset. It would take a psychiatrist to decide the motive."

Bear Hill Park Closed

A high fire hazard prompted closure today of Bear Hill Park by the Capital Regional District, which is monitoring all 10 regional parks closely in the current heat wave.

Next to close could be East Sooke Park, the largest of the area's regional parks and most vulnerable to fire because of restricted access and water supply.

Bear Hill, on the Saanich-Central Saanich boundary, was first to close because it has no vehicular access for firefighting equipment and is bordered by residential property.

Parks supervisor Jack Kanhoffen said the public had been careful so far in the season and no fires have been reported in regional parks. But with each dry day the risk becomes greater and it is in the public interest to take the further step of closure where the hazard is greatest.

He said the Mt. Work area in Durrance Lake Park also is being considered as a closed area. There has already been a fire on nearby private property, Kanhoffen said.

Help Asked in Rapist Hunt

Colwood RCMP have appealed for help in a two-month-old rape case, details of which have only now been made public.

An RCMP spokesman said the suspect sought it about six feet tall, 25 years old, with shoulder-length blonde hair and is wanted in connection with the rape of a 29-year-old Langford woman in Metchosin June 17.

The woman had been hitchhiking with her two children, a girl, aged three and a boy five, on Goldstream Avenue and was picked up shortly after midnight by the suspect driving a white van.

The suspect introduced himself as "Jim."

Police said the man took the woman to a deserted road in Metchosin and threatened he would harm the woman's children if she didn't obey him.

The boy escaped and ran to a nearby house and woke up the resident.

The resident returned with the boy in time to see the van drive off.

Police did not reveal the incident beause, the spokesman said, investigators thought they had a lead on the van and felt, if the suspect knew, he might flee.

The leads, however, failed to produce either the suspect or the van, which is described as an early 60s model Ford Econoline or similar GM or Chrysler product.

Anyone with information about the suspect or vehicle is asked to contact Colwood RCMP at 388-3123.

Crepes Suzette Without Fuss

craig claiborne

NEW YORK — Crepes suzette, as served traditionally in a restaurant, are demanding of space and time.

The maitre d'hotel, or whoever, carefully adds the crepes to the crepe butter, turning and folding with fork and spoon. The version here is much simplified. The crepes are smeared with crepe butter, arranged in quantity in a crepe pan or other dish and heated in the oven. They are then ready to be finished and served without fuss to numerous guests.

CREPES SUZETTE

The crepes:
1 cup flour
2 small eggs
1¼ to 1½ cups milk
½ tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ tablespoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt
The crepe butter:
12 lumps of sugar (called "hostess" cubes)
1 orange
½ pound sweet butter, at room temperature
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon Grand Marnier
For flaming:
1 tablespoon sugar
½ to three-quarters cup cognac (plus or including, if desired, a little maraschino, kirsch and/or Grand Marnier).

1. Prepare the crepes. Place the flour in a mixing bowl and make a well in the centre. Add the eggs and, while stirring with a wire whisk, add half a cup of the milk. Beat to make as smooth as possible. Add more milk to make the batter the consistency of heavy cream. Put the mixture through a fine sieve. Or it may be blended. If it is blended, it must be left to stand for two hours or longer before proceeding. In any event, stir in the sugar, butter, vanilla and salt.

2. Rub the bottom of a crepe pan (four-, five-, six- or seven-inch bottom diameter) with a piece of paper toweling that has been dipped in butter. This is necessary for the first crepe and probably unnecessary after the first crepe has been made if the crepe pan is properly cured.

3. Spoon two to four tablespoons of the crepe batter into the pan and quickly swirl the pan around this way and that until the bottom is evenly coated. The crepe should be quite thin. Cook briefly until the crepe "sets" and starts to brown lightly on the bottom. Using a spatula, turn the crepe in the skillet and cook briefly on the other side without browning. Turn out onto wax paper. A properly made crepe, held up to the light, looks like lace. Continue cooking until all the batter is used.

4. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

5. When all the crepes are made, prepare the crepe butter. Rub the lumps of sugar all over the skin of the orange, then squeeze the orange and save the juice. Place the lumps between sheets of wax papper and crush them with a rolling pin. Spoon or pour the sugar into a mixing bowl and add the butter, sugar, lemon juice, one-half cup orange juice and Grand Marnier. Beat to blend well, preferably with an electric mixer.

6. Smear the top (the unbrowned side) of each crepe with a teaspoon or so of the crepe butter and fold once, then twice to make a triangle. Rub the bottom of a large skillet (there are special crepe skillets, which are convenient but not essential) with the remaining crepe butter.

7. Arrange the crepes over the skillet and sprinkle the tablespoon of sugar over all. Place in the oven and bake for five minutes.

8. Place the pan over an open flame such as a gas burner or the burner of a chafing dish. Sprinkle the cognac mixture over the crepes and ignite. Ladle the sauce over the crepes until the flame dies.

Yield: 24 to 36 crepes.

Try Something New

Some of our cooking readers do not need coaxing to try something new. In fact, some of our younger hostesses keep track of meals they have served at parties to be sure they do not repeat themselves. It is a joy to me to serve them.

The Scandinavian Salad I am dishing up today is a main course or, as the Scandinavians would do, it could be served as part of a variety of a summer buffet or smorgasbord.

This salad could be made one day in advance if immediately covered and refigerated after making.

SCANDINAVIAN SALAD
(serves 8 to 10)

2 7-oz. cans tuna, drained
½ c. finely chopped celery
½ green pepper, finely chopped
¼ c. chopped pimento-stuffed olives
1 10-oz. carton dairy sour cream
1 tbsp. horseradish and 1 tbsp. prepared mustard (OR 2 tbsp. horseradish)
1 tsp. lemon juice
¾ tsp. dill weed
½ tsp. M.S.G. (accent—optional)
½ tsp. salt

NOTE: To obtain three cups cooked marcaroni, in large pot of salted boiling water (about 8 cups), cook raw elbow macaroni until tender. Drain through colander and rinse well with cold water. Drain again. Turn into large bowl. Mix in tuna, celery, green pepper and olives.

In small bowl combine thoroughly the sour cream, horseradish, mustard, lemon juice, dill weed, MSG (if used) and salt. Add to macaroni mixture and combine carefully to avoid breaking the macaroni. Chill in refrigerator.

Free For The Asking

By HARRIET HART

If you saw a beef carcass, would you know where the different cuts come from? The illustrated folder Save On Your Beef Buying Dollar shows you exactly the position of the various cuts. It says that all cuts of beef can be equally tender and delicious, if they are properly cooked. As different cuts require different cooking methods, the folder includes a chart which shows you how to prepare tender beef, irrespective of the cut you use. Economical cuts are just as nutritious as more expensive ones. They are also versatile and even lend themselves to gourmet dishes.

In addition, the folder offers many money-saving tips. For example, it states that the cheapest form of ground beef is generally the best buy. Although it probably contains more fat than other kinds, government regulations stipulate that even low cost ground beef must not contain more than 30 per cent fat.

You can enjoy an inexpensive steak dinner if you buy blade or chuck steaks. They should be marinated before broiling to make them tender. For an economical beef roast, buy blade or cross-cut rib roast. These roasts can be oven braised. Shoulder, chuck and short rib roasts make delicious pot roasts.

Variety meats, like liver, kidney and heart are not only inexpensive, they are also very nutritious. They provide low cost protein as well as sizable amounts of iron and vitamins A and B.

Do Teen-agers Really Need to Diet?

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Weight-watching is a popular North American sport, and probably no segment of the population goes about it with more enthusiasm than teen-agers — particularly teen-age girls.

While studies show that 10 to 20 per cent of our teen-agers are obese, this does not mean that every teen-ager who thinks he or she is overweight should go on a diet. There is the classic situation of the young girl of perfectly normal weight, who thinks that she's too fat and puts herself onto a crash diet in order to look like her favorite skin-and-bones fashion model.

Moreover, not every teen-ager who indeed is overweight should go on a diet. Children, particularly boys, often put on a good deal of weight in early adolescence before they spurt up in height. This type of fatness will be outgrown, and much of the stored weight is needed for the growth spurt. Also, before reaching full sexual maturity, young people put on large amounts of lean tissue, and ill-timed dieting may interfere with optimal growth.

Still other teen-agers definitely should not be on a weight-reduction diet unless they are under the careful supervision of a physician. At the onset of menstruation, for example, young girls need a normal number of calories to enable their bodies to cope with the profound physical changes taking place.

Most physicians also rule out dieting in a teen-ager with emotional problems on the theory that the additional stress of dieting may cause even more problems. Finally, those teen-age girls who become pregnant should not try to lose weight because this may endanger not only their own health but also that of the fetus.

Apart from these exceptions, however, there are lots of teen-agers for whom weight-watching and dieting are wise. In a recent study of thousands of North American teenagers, Drs. Stanley Garn and Diane Clark of the University of Michigan found a striking correlation between overweight teen-agers and overweight parents. The likelihood of obesity increased if both parents were overweight, and the chances were even higher if there were other overweight siblings at home.

Earlier studies have found a similar correlation between overweight parents and younger children. This apparent genetic tendency toward obesity means that youngsters who enter adolescence with a weight problem are more likely to stay fat. In addition, there may be a family eating-exercise pattern that further adds to the problem.

Although physical activity was not measured in the Michigan study, we know that teen-agers who are very sedentary are likely to have weight problems.

What can teen-agers and their families who fall into these groups do about weight problems? First, they should see a doctor. Rapidly growing and maturing young people need all the essential nutrients as well as a certain number of calories for optimal development. A physician can prescribe a balanced reducing diet, or may even advise against dieting for the time being.

Second, every young person who has had an okay from a physician can undertake an exercise program. By increasing physical activity and moderately decreasing caloric intake, sensible weight loss will occur.

Third, if other members of the family are overweight, it will help if they, too, diet.

It's hard for only one family member to be on a diet, and chances of success are greatly improved if those who need to lose weight diet together. Parents should also provide good erercise as well as good eating models for their children.

The Need for Respect Common to All

elizabeth forbes

"Remember, the bright new Yale key will not open an ancient lock unless the user understands its mechanism."

That bit of advice remains clear in the memory of Miss A. Dorothy Potts, now retired and living in Victoria.

It was given her more than 25 years ago by Dr. Ali T. Shousha — "A very wise man", she says.

She was about to join the United Nations World Health Organization (WHO) and he was regional director for its eastern Mediterranean area.

Looking back, Dorothy Potts says "understanding the mechanism to me was to learn that all peoples of whatever nation share a common denominator — the need for recognition and respect.

"Also that the extent to which the international civil servant is able to succeed in introducing change depends on his or her ability to grasp and operate on that credo."

Miss Potts had just completed three years as director of nursing at Belleville Hospital in Ontario when she joined WHO in 1952 and set out alone for East Pakistan (now Bangladesh) to organize a program and arrange to head a WHO team that would train nurses at the basic level as teachers.

"It was shortly after partition," she recalls. "Hindus and the British had left. There were 750 patients in the Dacra Medical College Hospital when I arrived and only 70 young nurses to care for them. They had little or no time for more training so I had to look farther afield."

Eventually, with government permission, she selected four young women who had nearly completed training and started them on a two-year course in which they would learn teaching methods in theory and practice. After that they would go abroad for final training.

In the next group she selected there were six young women. By then Miss Potts had been joined by other WHO nurses and she was head of an eight-member team.

"We worked closely with the government of the country," she explained. "We consulted them about everything and gradually we established a well-balanced program that included pediatrics, public health and midwifery."

Although she left Dacra in 1956, the program Dorothy Potts started there continued for almost 12 years. Sometime later, when she returned for a short visit, there was the satisfaction of seeing 32 girls sent abroad for final training during the time she was there, all back in Pakistan and working in hospitals and health centres.

Not only that, she found a number of well-established schools, all headed by trained women nurses.

The year 1957 was spent in New York where she completed her Masters degree at Columbia University.

This was followed by a year with WHO in Singapore, again teaching nurses, and then 7½ years (1958-66) based in Alexandria, Egypt, as WHO adviser at the regional level for 18 countries stretching from North Africa almost to Pakistan and including the Moslem world, Israel and Ethiopia — "but not Turkey."

In that capacity, Dorothy Potts was responsible for the employment of WHO nurses and the development of teaching programs.

"We gave basic training to many young girls whose only experience with reading and writing came through UNESCO. They had never been to school," she remembers. "We also singled out young women capable of working toward degree training and gave them a start.

Moslem women were still living, for the most part, in seclusion. The men did everything. Their women rarely appeared in mixed company.

So, in Moslem countries WHO nurses, of necessity, selected Arab women for the first training courses.

There was another seven or so years work for Miss Potts, again as regional adviser, in the French Congo, with headquarters at Brazzaville.

"Here we were mostly in the English- and French-speaking countries including Nigeria, Kenya and Uganda, and we concentrated not so much on basic training as on supervision and demonstrations."

So, after 21 years in foreign lands, the time came to think of where she would make her future home.

Born in Saskatchewan, with five years overseas service as a nurse with the Canadian Army (1940-45) and two years on the teaching staff of Toronto General Hospital before joining the Belleville Hospital, it was natural her thoughts eventually turned to Canada, and to Victoria where she had close friends.

Today, she shares a home with a friend at 3395 Browning. She plays golf, does a bit of gardening and maintains a keen interest in the work of WHO.

Two years ago she went back to the Congo where the programs she had started had grown to include training schools where as many as 82 women were starting courses, every two years.

Now she is planning another visit in October, this time to Egypt and then the Congo, and she confident she will find WHO programs still increasing in scope and responsibility.

It is also her belief that the main reason WHO has been more successful than some other United Nations programs is because women spearheaded much of the work in its pioneer days; the women they worked with around the world were eager to learn and those women are now teaching and training other women in their own countries around the world.

Postscript; One of Dorothy Potts present interests is as a member of Victoria's UNICEF committee and in that capacity she is ready and willing to speak to any group about the work of WHO and UNICEF. If you are looking for an interesting program to start off the fall and winter season, get in touch with her. The telephone number is 592-6340.

Nagging May Help

DEAR ABBY: I am concerned about my husband's health. He eats everything on his plate as fast as he can, then he starts eating off the children's plates.

He is 37 and admits to having put on "about 40" pounds in the last year, but I think it's more.

He is a physician, so he must be aware of the damage he's doing to his health. When I mention it to him he becomes irritable and accuses me of nagging him.

He's always looking for candy or something to snack between meals, and I'm sure he must be eating at the office, too.

How can I help him without nagging him? — CONCERNED WIFE.

DEAR CONCERNED: His overeating could be a symptom of a deeper emotional problem. Persuade him to see a physician even though he is one. (It's said that a doctor who treats himself has a fool for a patient.) And if you have to nag him, nag him. An irritable husband is better than a dead one.

DEAR ABBY: It's almost time for my mom to tell me about sex. How can I tell her I already know everything? — KNOW IT ALL.

DEAR KNOW: Wait until after she tells you what she thinks you ought to know. You may not know EVERYTHING.

DEAR ABBY: I am 39 years old but don't look it. I weigh 147 pounds and stand 5 feet 2 inches tall. I keep myself looking nice and carry my weight well. I think I look a lot better at this weight than if I were to reduce and get all wrinkled in the face and neck like lots of women I know.

I am divorced and have been going with Harvey for a year now. He is 50. He speaks of marriage and I am all for it, but here is the catch. He says, "If you will go on a diet and keep losing weight until I tell you to stop, and then show me your birth certificate, I will marry you."

Abby, I never told him how old I was because I never thought it was important. Besides, we are near enough the same age, and I look younger than Harvey. How about the dieting part? Set me straight. I like him a lot. — HARVEY'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Better show him your birth certificate first. It might not be necessary for you to lose the weight.

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago my older sister was engaged to marry a man I'll call Bill, but he broke the engagement to marry another girl. (He got her pregnant and her father threatened to kill him.) My sister was heartbroken for a year, but she finally got over it. Now she's married to a very nice fellow. Bill's wife had two more kids in the meantime, but their marriage didn't work out so they are being divorced.

I bumped into Bill two weeks ago and he asked me out. I went, but I didn't tell my folks because they hate him. I have seen him several times, but I don't like sneaking around. I am 17 and Bill is 27. Do you see any reason why I can't date him out in the open?

How can I make my folks accept Bill? He's really not a bad guy, he's just had some tough breaks.

KID SISTER

DEAR KID: Without judging Bill (circumstances have already done that) may I suggest that you not reopen old wounds nor add to your parents' anxieties by becoming involved with a loser like Bill.

DEAR READERS: Last weekend I published 10 tips for wives who want a successful marriage. Here are 10 for husbands:

1. Don't ever forget her birthday, anniversary, Christmas or Valentine's Day.
2. Don't keep talking about the beautiful young chicks at work.
3. Don't pick up something to read when she's trying to talk to you.
4. Don't ever bring a friend home for dinner without asking her first.
5. Don't use her car and return it with an empty gas tank.
6. If you know you're going to be late getting home, call and tell her.
7. Don't try to make her jealous.
8. Don't look like a slob all weekend.
9. If you know you're wrong, don't be too stubborn to admit it.
10. Don't ever go to sleep without telling her that you love her.

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Four members of my immediate family and three people in my husband's family became sick after a picnic. They had nausea, vomiting and diarrhea. I was the only one who didn't get sick. Since I prepared the food I feel terrible. I'm a good, clean, careful cook and housekeeper. How could this happen to me? — Mrs. L.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

The fact that you were fortunate enough not to get sick has probably increased your guilt about the experience.

Even with the greatest care, bacteria can inadvertently get into some foods and flourish there. The staphylococcus germ, the salmonella, and a whole range of culprits may be responsible for food poisoning.

One of the reasons that group infections occur after parties or picnics is because of improper refrigeration. Normally, in the home, refrigeration of eggs, custards, potato salad or other dishes prepared with mayonnaise routinely protect them from the heat. A moderate amount of carelessness creeps in when these foods are transported and kept exposed to summer heat.

Vancouver Opens Porn Assault

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police and prosecutors have launched their long-awaited crackdown on pornography after a meeting between police vice squad officials and senior Crown counsel Bruce Donald to discuss anti-pornography guidelines.

Acting police superintendent Vic Lake said police have begun investigating Vancouver stores for material falling within the guidelines. Meanwhile, the Crown counsel's office is examining Canadian court rulings on obscenity to determine what material can be successfully prosecuted.

"The guidelines as we understand them are that if there are publications that a person can buy that involve sex and violence, sex and children or sex and animals (bestiality) that the Crown counsel will consider taking these into court under the obscenity section of the Criminal Code," Lake said.

Included in the guidelines are rubber simulated sex organs, he said.

Also to be considered for prosecution will be stores selling films containing sex acts which fall within the guidelines, Lake said, adding that police will concentrate only on material for sale in stores, not pornography sold through the mail.

The first thrust of the crackdown will be toward offensive publications for sale "in public view," he said. But he left open the possibility that stores which keep the books hidden from view may also be subject to prosecution.

The guidelines correspond with those announced last week by Mayor Jack Volrich, who said they were conveyed to him by the attorney-general's department.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said last week he had given no directives to Volrich, but added that the director of criminal law had been told to inform prosecutors of the need for action in pornography cases.

Gardom said material involving child sex, bestiality, violence and sadism definitely offends contemporary community standards, which is the guideline set by the Supreme Court of Canada for dealing with pornography, and prosecutions will follow from the publication of such material.

Gardon added that "adult" pornographic material which does not offend the standards, is permissible but must be kept out of the reach of children and not be available outside of a store.

NOT ALL DOGS can read, as this young Toronto mutt demonstrates, as it anoints fence surrounding one of the growing number of canine comfort stations in the area.

A Round Of Beer To Blame?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A scuffle between a native Indian leader and a Vancouver policeman would not have occurred if the Indian had not been duped into buying an extra round of beer, Vancouver provincial court was told Weenesday.

Bill Wilson, president of the United Native Nations, testified that some Vancouver bars regularly trick Indians into buying more beer just before closing time.

He said patrons are made to pay for the beer and then ordered to leave minutes later, before they can finish it.

He was testifying at the trial of Ronald George, United Native Nations vice-president. George is charged with common assault and assaulting a police officer at a city cabaret March 13.

Wilson said he and his companions refused to leave because they had paid for their beer and wanted to finish it.

Const. Douglas Stuckel told Judge J. L. Davies that George punched him after he pulled on George's chair and told him to leave.

George said he only grabbed Stuckel to defend himself after Stuckel struck him on the head with a flashlight.

Wilson said the officer swore at the Indians repeatedly, hit them several times with his flashlight and swept beer bottles and glasses off the table where the group was sitting.

LRB Blocks Mason Firms' Attempts to Leave CLRA

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board Wednesday refused to allow three Vancouver-area masonry contractors to leave the Construction Labor Relations Association of B.C. (CLRA).

Ed Peck, board vice-chairman, ruled that the differences Pedersen and Mactaggart Ltd., Fred Lutje Masonry Ltd., and Elligott Masonry Ltd. have with the association "do not appear to relate to collective bargaining objectives."

The three contractors, which left the Masory Contractors Association (MCA) for the Unit Massonry Contractors Association (UMCA), allege that the MCA is misusing a fund set up to promote the industry and complained that they are not sufficiently represented on the committee handling it. The MCA is directly affiliated with the CLRA while the UMCA is not.

Hewitt 'Insulting'

VERNON (CP) — Vernon Mayor Stuart Fleming says a letter detailing Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt's response to a proposed federal-provincial research program is totally irresponsible.

"I find this letter so insulting and inadeauate I can hardly express myself," Fleming said at a city council meeting. "This is the most ridiculous letter I have ever received from a minister of the Crown, or any elected official for that matter."

In the meeting with Hewitt last month, Fleming suggested that a federal-provincial research program, designed to qualify for funding under the agricultural rehabilitation program, should investigate the possibility of producing food crops irrigated with treated sewage.

In his letter to Fleming, Hewitt said Vernon would benefit from such research and should help pay for any program.

Swimmer Missing

VANDERHOOF (CP) — RCMP said Jay Perchie, 18, of Vanderhoof was missing and presumed drowned after he disappeared in the Nechako River near here Tuesday while attempting to swim to a mid-river float. Divers were searching for the man's body.

Crash Blameless

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A coroner's jury attached no blame after an inquest into a March 4 airplane crash at Tezzeron Lake, about 20 miles north of here, that took five lives.

The jury said that inconclusive evidence forced the verdict. The plane was on its way from Prince George to Lovell Cover on Takla Lake when it crashed, killing pilot Gordon McMullen, Dr. Brent Russell, Jill Weichell Perham and Jean-Henry de La Nee, all of Prince George, and Stella Margart Goodvin of Mackenzie.

Murder Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Frances Elizabeth Isaac, 29, of Whitehorse, has been charged with second-degree murder in the death of her foster daughter, Joy Ann Ladue, 3. The girl was brought to hospital suffering from head and other injuries and died there July 20.

Homicide Expected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police were holding two men in connection with a rooming house fire Tuesday night which claimed the life of Eldon Graham, 65. Police said they were treating the death as a homicide but no charges had been laid.

Judge Sworn In

COQUITLAM (CP) — Lawyer Lorne Clare was sworn in as a provincial court judge. A court spokesman said Clare initially will travel throughout the province and may later come to the Coquitlam bench.

DISCO BEAT IS FADING IF YOU'RE 14

BURNABY (CP) — Fourteen-year-old disco fans won't be able to dance with 15-year-old friends in this municipality's discotheques if a bylaw passed by council wins provincial approval.

Burnaby council voted Tuesday to regulate discotheque operating hours so that customers aged 15 to 18 would be separated from those aged 13 and 14.

When the council's solicitor advised that the bylaw was beyond council's authority, the aldermen passed the law anyway and then voted to ask the province to make it legal.

Mayor Tom Constable said the age regulations would "protect the citizens as council sees necessary" by eliminating noise, vandalism and parking congestion near discos.

Leftover Bombs

TERRACE (CP) — Bomb disposal experts Wednesday found that two partially-hidden bombs discovered near the Kitimat-Terrace airport are Second World War training bombs containig no explosives.

RCMP said the bombs were found by Jose Coosmans of Terrace while searching for mushrooms near this community about 450 miles northwest of Vancouver.

No Rubbing Alcohol

VANCOUVER (CP) — A police investigation has turned up little evidence that rubbing alcohol is openly available in the city's skid road, Insp. Vic Lake said Wednesday.

He said a detective disguised as a skid road alcoholic had been trying unsuccessfully since Friday to buy rubbing alcohol from a number of stores in the area, and detoxification centres report only a small increase in the number of patients drunk on rubbing alcohol.

The detective's tour concentrated on one grocery store which city hall complained was selling it, Lake said. The detective entered the store clutching an empty rubbing alcohol container, in the company of a skid road regular he had befriended, but the clerk said rubbing alcohol was not available at that store. Lake credited the scarcity to recent publicity, stirred up by the Downtown Eastside Residents Association.

Ottawa Rejects Separate Native States for N.W.T.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government turned thumbs down Wednesday on the idea of separate native states in the Northwest Territories, and the move immediately was called a partial rejection of the Berger report.

"Legislative authority and governmental jurisdiction are not allocated in Canada on grounds that differentiate between the people on the basis of race," said a 20-page northern policy statement issued by Prime Minister Trudeau's office.

Land claims submitted to Ottawa by N.W.T. Indians and Inuit (Eskimo) have called for separate native territories. But the policy paper said these demands are "well beyond the policy the federal government is prepared to follow."

Indians and Inuit argue that they need territorial jurisdictions, with wide powers, to survive as distinct cultural groups.

George Erasmus, N.W.T. Indian Brotherhood president, called the policy paper hypocritical while Arnold McCallum, N.W.T. legislative council spokesman, said he is pleased the native state concept has been rejected.

Both said the paper rejects the ideas of Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, who conducted the three-year Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry.

Berger, in his May 9 report to Ottawa, recommended special status for N.W.T. natives. He wrote that the concept of a Dene nation in the N.W.T. is not a renunciation of Canada but a proclamation that the Indians are a distinct people.

"The idea of new institutions that give meaning to native self-determination should not frighten us," he wrote.

Dene means the people in a majority of Mackenzie Valley native languages and as brotherhood president, Erasmus is considered the Dene leader.

He said the policy paper is the official response to the pipeline report and that it refuses to consider Berger's views on native self-determination.

McCallum, chairman of council's constitutional committee, said the federal cabinet has gone against Berger.

The legislative council also opposes Berger's recommended 10-year moratorium on the Mackenzie gas pipeline and hopes cabinet will reject that idea. Cabinet begins meeting to make a pipeline decision Friday night but the Mackenzie route is considered unlikely, partially because of the Berger report.

The policy paper said native rights and interests must be protected and that it may be possible to divide the huge territory on the basis of common interests.

Indians and Inuit would form a sizeable proportion of the population of any new territories, enabling them to exert strong influence.

DRURY NAMED N.W.T. ADVISER

OTTAWA (FP) — Former federal cabinet minister C. M. (Bud) Drury has been named as special government agent to oversee constitutional developments in the Northwest Territories.

The prime minister's office announced Wednesday that Drury's job would be to consult all northern groups on ways to alter and improve "representative and responsive government" in the Territories.

Drury, Liberal MP for Montreal-Westmount since 1962, will retain his Commons seat, according to the prime minister's office.

However, it has been reported that Drury, 65, would not seek re-election at the next general election. He resigned from the cabinet last September after 13 years in various portfolios.

Reporting directly to Prime Minister Trudeau, Drury is to start work by the end of summer. He is authorized to set up a headquarters in the Northwest Territories.

Some officials said it seemed unusual for a sitting MP to have such an advisory position.

The prime minister's office said that while Drury's expenses would be paid, he would receive no extra salary as special representative for the Territories.

The terms of reference for the job show the Drury appointment to be the government's response to growing pressures from northern natives and whites for more political autonomy.

Even the Monkey Was Repossessed . . .

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — One buddha, weight 98 pounds, value $20,000. Two elephant tusks, brass mounted, height seven feet.

One monkey, black, with violin, height six feet.

They all came out of number 52 Chester Square on Wednesday afternoon, among more than 100 items of exotic furnishings seized under writ by three companies which had loaned them to Esther Stedman of Toronto.

"Did you mention my maiden name was Birn?" she asked, sitting under the huge chandelier in the living room of the six-floor Belgravia house she is trying to sell for "in excess of half a million pounds."

"Here go the shells, thank heavens," Mrs. Stedman remarked as some particularly ugly patio furniture made of large sea-shells was carried out to the three vans lined up on the fashionable pavement.

"I'm going away somewhere for a month — somewhere it's warm," Mrs. Stedman added.

"Just odd knick knacks," she said as several huge, brass dragonflies were removed.

The furnishings were being repossessed by Zurach Interior Decorators, Redmile Antiques and Rowland Ward Ltd., taxidermists.

The firms said Mrs. Stedman had broken contracts they held with her for the furniture to be displayed for sale with the house, which had been advertised in Al-Arab, the London newspaper catering to the influx of Middle East visitors, as well as elsewhere.

Total value of the goods was said to be about $144,000.

The press arrived with the vans.

Mrs. Stedman emerged clad in a low cut batik print dress.

Her way had been to fly over her own decorator, Nick Grande from New York, and sign the contracts in late May with the three companies. But when the contracts expired in the first week of July, the companies said they couldn't get back their goods."

ORLANDO AILING

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Tony Orlando, in a state of "physical and emotional exhaustion," has been taken to a private hospital where he is being treated for stress that prompted his recent announcement that he is quitting show business, a friend of the singer said Wednesday.

Orlando, whose friend Freddy Prinze committed suicide last January, was haunted by Prinze's death and the death of his own retarded sister last year.

"He is physically and emotionally exhausted," said Frank Lieberman, Orlando's press agent. "He's under a doctor's care in a hospital outside Los Angeles. His wife is with him."

Hero Burial For Powers

LOS ANGELES — Francis Gary Powers, the U2 spy plane pilot who was killed Monday in the crash of his traffic-reporting helicopter, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery, it was disclosed Wednesday. A spokesman for TV station KNBC, for whom Powers flew traffic and aerial news missions, said the U.S. Secretary of the Army had asked Powers' family that the pilot be honored by burial in a site near the Potomac River reserved for those who lost their lives in the service of the United States.

SEATTLE — Egil Krogh Jr., disbarred for his role as chief of the White House Plumbers, has asked the Washington State Bar Association to reinstate him. Krogh's petition will be considered at a hearing of the association's board of governors Aug. 31. The state Supreme Court disbarred Krogh in 1975 for his involvement in the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

HOLLYWOOD — While hundreds of "Star Wars" fans screamed in delighted approval, robots R2D2 and C3PO entered the ranks of movie immortals, putting their footprints in the sidewalk outside the Chinese Theatre. Anthony Daniels, the British actor who played C3PO, lurched out Wednesday to dab the feet of his golden robot suit in the cement. Kenny Baker, the dwarf who manipulated the bleeping and squeaking little R2D2 in the popular space film, was in London, so 20th Century Fox dispatched one of the remote-controlled versions also used in the film. It rolled up the sidewalk and ceremoniously dipped all three little trundlers in the wet cement.

LOS ANGELES — Tatum O'Neal will follow Elizabeth Taylor's footsteps by playing the lead in MGM's International Velvet. Miss Taylor made her major debut as a child actress in National Velvet, filmed by MGM in 1944. Now Bryan Forbes has updated the plot to tell the story of the horse-loving niece of Velvet Brown, the Taylor role. Miss O'Neal, Oscar winner as supporting actress for Paper Moon, will be directed by Forbes on locations in England and the United States this fall.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — Marty Haggard, son of country-western singer Merle Haggard, was in satisfactory condition at a hospital here after being shot in the side by a hitchhiker. Haggard, 19, was shot once and robbed of a small amount of cash by a man he picked up, sheriff's deputies said. The assailant fled, but a passing motorist spotted Haggard and rushed him to Kern Medical Centre for emergency surgery. Haggard had improved Wednesday from serious condition.

Strange Worlds Lie Ahead for Sky Probes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Voyager spacecraft ready to scout Jupiter, Saturn and possibly Uranus and Neptune may see a variety of strange worlds including the salt beds of extinct seas and exotic landforms of ice and mud, the space agency said today.

The first of the twin television probes is scheduled for launch from Cape Canaveral Aug. 20, and the second will depart Sept. 1. Both missions may last a decade or longer and give man his first closeup look at a dozen bodies in the solar system.

In announcing details of the two missions, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the four largest satellites of Jupiter will "provide a varying and fascinating microcosm of unique worlds."

The twin television cameras on the two Voyagers will get good looks at all five of Jupiter's inner satellites, the major satellites of Saturn and that planet's awesome rings.

Scientists say the pictures of the inner Jovian satellites alone should provide a wealth of information. Some are believed to be made up largely of rock, some of ice and some of water.

"Their surfaces probably range from lunar-like cratered plains, to salt-covered beds of extinct seas, to exotic landforms created out of ice and mud," NASA said.

Most satellites of Saturn apparently are composed primarily of ice. Titan, the largest moon in the solar system, has a strange, cold atmosphere as thick as Earth's.

Jupiter and Saturn seem to be immense balls of hydrogen and helim with no apparent solid surface. Each has its own internal energy sources, putting out more radiation than it receives from the sun.

Voyager 1 is scheduled to fly within 173,000 miles of Jupiter on March 5, 1979, then swing on to scout Saturn, coming within 86,000 miles on Nov. 12, 1980. Voyager 2, which will be launched first on a slower course, will fly by Jupiter July 10, 1979, and pass Saturn Aug. 27, 1981.

If all goes well, Voyager 2 will be sent on to scout Uranus in 1986 and may continue on the survey Neptune.

Check Local Parks for Ideas

August is considered the vacation month by a great many West Coast gardeners, but it does not mean that gardening is laid aside and forgotten.

The true gardener is still a gardener on vacation, for it is the time when the home garden is left in the care of others while we assess the gardens in places far and near.

August therefore becomes the month of observation, observing the effects others have created with plants well known to us, and noting the use of plants which are strangers.

Not only in home gardens do ideas abound. The most fruitful sources of effects, arrangements, and unknown plant material are the public parks found in every city.

The parks of our own city, wherever we live, are often filled with horticultural inspirations that are greedily devoured by visitors, yet totally unknown to many local residents.

Comparatively few home gardeners are conversant with the plantings of annuals, the Rose Garden, and the waterside plants in Beacon Hill Park.

Thousands of car drivers and their passengers pause daily by the urns at Humber Green, waiting for a green light, oblivious of the ideas that could be a feature in the home garden.

Playfair Park, off Quadra Street or Tattersall Drive, is a comprehensive collection of the genus Rhododendron, ideal for home gardeners to make comparisons, learn the size and flowering times of the different species and hybrids, and enjoy their year around beauty.

Gorge Park contains many of the plantings belonging to the one-time Japanese Tea Gardens, unusual plants, figs, bamboos, and many ideas for the owner of a sloping garden.

August is a month for planning, for adapting ideas seen in far away places, and for bringing the home garden nearer to the pleasant oasis we have dreamed of by noting its failings and weaknesses and figuring the steps by which they can be corrected in September.

August is also the month of enjoyment, the time when gardeners from one part of the continent visit gardeners in another part, when methods, successes, and failures are discussed, and yarns similar to those told by fishermen are exchanged.

Vacation time for a gardener is a busman's holiday, a time when he shares his knowledge with others and receives theirs in return.

Whether at home or en tour, the gardener is watching for ideas of other gardeners, particularly their outstanding successes, and these are brought back as notes and memories with the view to making the home garden a richer and more satisfying haven in the Augusts to come.

Remunerative, educational, enlightening, stimulating, and yet withal restful, that is August — vacation time.

Masses Grieve For Makarios

NICOSIA (Reuter) — Thousands of Greek-Cypriot mourners, including small children, lined up for hours to kiss the hand and robe of the late Archbishop Makarios as he lay in state Wednesday in Nicosia's historic Cathedral of St. John.

In a massive display of grief, patient crowds filed silently past the open coffin of the first president of Cyprus as it lay beneath a vaulted roof hung with chandeliers, facing an ornate gold altar covered with icons.

Watched by a few policemen, the mourners crossed themselves and bent in farewell tribute before the familiar bearded figure of the late head of the Greek Orthodox Church in Cyprus. A black-robed priest read prayers from the altar.

Acting President Spyros Kyprianou told the country in a radio broadcast Wednesday night that the death of Makarios on Wednesday of a heart attack was "a blow of tremendous dimensions."

"We have a duty to follow in his footsteps and to continue the struggle for the survival of our country," he said.

Many people were shocked at the death of the president, having been lulled into believing that his return to work so soon after a heart attack in April indicated a complete recovery.

"My first reaction was to cry," said one Greek-Cypriot man. "I couldn't believe it."

A state funeral will be held here Monday and the archbishop will be buried at Kykkos Monastery in the mountains of southwest Cyprus, which he entered as a novice in the 1930s.

The charismatic religious and political leader, so familiar on the world stage with his greyflecked beard, black robe, chain and tall black ecclesiastical hat, will be difficult to replace.

Kyprianou, 44, will fulfill the late archbishop's secular role until elections are held.

But Kyprianou, a former foreign minister, only recently left the hospital himself after unspecified treatment and suffered a heart attack in 1969.

Under the constitution he will act as president for 45 days. He can remain in office longer, until new elections are held, if the Council of Ministers and the House of Representatives approves.

The cabinet meets today to decide whether Kyprianou should serve until February, when Makarios' term in office was due to end.

The Holy Synod of the autonomous Greek Orthodox Church of Cyprus met Wednesday to consider choosing a successor.

Canadians Sell 3 Whales To U.S. Navy for Research

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The U.S. Navy has purchased three Beluga whales for use in military experiments at a navy research laboratory in San Diego, Calif.

The white whales, native to the Arctic Ocean and Hudson Bay, were collected by Nanuk Enterprises of Churchill.

Clark Bowers, a civilian biological technician working with the navy's scientific team, said the Belugas have a "unique diving physiology" which the navy wants to study.

It is the first time the navy has collected the large mammal which belongs to the same family as the dolphin and porpoise.

The three white whales are being held in tanks in Churchill and will be flown to the Naval Ocean System Centre in San Diego on Friday.

"We will explore the Beluga's hearing, sonar and diving capabilities," said Bowers. "Through these experiments we hope to improve diving gear and sonar."

John Hicks, a spokesman for Nanuk, said he will be collecting two more whales this month for the Minnesota Zoological Society.

Plenty Of Fruit In Okanagan

PENTICTON (CP) — The projected 11-per-cent increase in the Okanagan peach crop will offset losses due to the hailstorm last week that damaged 10 per cent of the total crop, Nigel Taylor, president of British Columbia Tree Fruits Ltd., said Wednesday.

"The crop will be at least equal to that of last year and no shortages are anticipated," Taylor said in a news release.

"There is every reason for confidence in a continuing supply of fruit."

He said the plum crop was damaged and would be lower than average, but pears, apples and grapes should be normal.

During a period of five minutes the storm dropped hailstones as large as ping pong balls, damaging about 2,000 acres of orchard land in the Oliver area south of here. About half the crops affected were not covered by insurance.

Most of the apricot crop already had been harvested.

DOPER CANDY OFF MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Candy in plastic containers that look like hypodermic needles was pulled off the Canadian market Wednesday after tests by the federal health department found that it contains an illegal dye.

"The dye has to be harmful to people or it would be permitted," Nes Lubinsky, the department's public relations officer for Ontario, said in a telephone interview.

Tests completed Wednesday found the candy contains Ponceau 4R, an illegal dye similar to Red Dye No. 4, a suspected cancer-causing agent.

"The importer, Triple C Importers Ltd. of Hamilton, has been informed of this and has initiated voluntary recall of the product," Lubinsky said.

The company also has offices in Alberta and B.C and the product may have been distributed there as well as in Ontario. The candy has been on the Canadian market for about two weeks.

About 100 cases of the product had been imported from Holland, Lubinsky said.

CNTU Flatly Vetoes Voluntary Restraints

By DON BRAID
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Leaders of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions have flately rejected the federal government's proposal that unions exercise voluntary restraint in wage demands in return for an early end to wage and price controls.

After a 1½-hour meeting with cabinet ministers Wednesday president Andre L'Heureaux said the leaders insisted on an immediate end to controls on wages.

But they refused to consider voluntary restraints once controls are lifted, while pressing the government to keep some control over price increases.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald played down the differences at the meeting, but added, "it would be misleading to say there isn't quite a variety of opinion among the participants."

He attended the meeting with Labor Minister John Munro and Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien.

Macdonald also raised the possibility that controls will continue longer than the government wants if business and labor don't agree to restraints.

The unions are "still pressing pretty hard for the removal of controls, but I think they now understand there's a possibility controls may come off sooner if there's a chance of setting up restraints in the post-control period, than if nothing happens," he said.

By law, the government can keep controls in force until Dec. 31, 1978. Last Friday Macdonald proposed three dates for ending the system early: Oct. 14, the second anniversary of the anti-inflation program; Jan. 2, 1978; or Oct. 14, 1978.

After a lengthy meeting with labor and business leaders last Friday, Prime Minister Trudeau outlined three conditons for an early end to controls:

—A pledge from business and labor to follow voluntary restraints.

—Their agreement to participate in a consultative forum, along with government and consumer groups.

—Establishing an agency to monitor pay and price increases, and giving it power to investigate exceptional increases.

The CNT apparently is willing to consider the forum and agency recommendations, but only if the government agrees to abandon wage controls and forget the principle of restraint.

S. Koreans Stole U.S. Army Supplies

NEW YORK (AP) — Up to $17 million a year in food, uniforms and other supplies was stolen from the U.S. Army by South Koreans who exploited the U.S. government's computer system, says a retired army officer, who adds that the operation is continuing.

The New York Times says Lindsay Baird, who served as a provost marshal in Korea and on a squad which looked into theft and corruption there, gave detailed charges of an extensive Korean crime network to the staff of the Senate's governmental operations committee.

Baird, a retired lieutenant-colonel, said in his letter to the committee and in an interview with The Times that the operation began in the early 1970s and continues "at the same or slightly reduced level."

He said the army's logistics system was used to move about and store at convenient locations items the Koreans had decided to steal. Once such property was stolen, all records of its existence disappeared.

Food was stolen every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and in one case $103,000 worth of field uniforms was diverted.

An army spokesman in Washington said he is awaiting information from Korea aobut any investigations conducted in the early 1970s.

The spokesman said there are no records on file in Washington of any such investigation, although the results of investigations in the field might not be available there.

A spokesman for the Korean embassy in Washington said the allegations are "malicious lies not worthy of further comment."

New Projects For Blanshard

Two new developments along the west side of Blanshard north of Hillside — one already well on the way to completion, the other about to begin — will alter the landscape on a hitherto undeveloped section of the arterial road.

Under construction on the block bounded by Market, Blanshard, Hillside and Nanaimo is a commercial-residential project with total floor space of 77,560 square feet, including a bank and retail stores on the ground floor and 87 apartments (75 one-bedroom, 12 two-bedroom).

The development is governed by a land-use contract and construction is expected to be completed by the end of the year. Architect for the project is John Di Castri.

Further north, on property at Blanshard-Topaz-Nanaimo, Foreman Enterprises Ltd. proposes to build new headquarters for the RCMP.

Two buildings, one two storeys, the other three storeys, will provide a total of more than 71,000 square feet.

A land-use contract was approved a few months ago but the developers then applied for an extension of the contract's registration date.

However, a city spokesman said today that all formalities have now been completed and a building permit is ready for issuance. Meanwhile, excavation on the site has already started.

PRISONER SKIPS FROM HOSPITAL

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — A Washington state penitentiary prisoner using crutches to walk following hip surgery escaped from St. Mary's Hospital here, a prison spokesman said.

A witness saw Dennis Matter, 30, stow his crutches and leave the hospital with a woman driving a blue auto with Oregon licence plates, said spokesman A. J. Murphy.

Murphy said Matter had not been under constant surveillance. He said a hospital doctor had recently indicated Matter was not well enough to be transferred back to more limited care at the prison hospital.

IMF Raises $55M

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The International Monetary Fund (IMF) raised $55 million Wednesday in the 12th of its series of gold auctions to finance a special trust fund for the world's poorest countries. Since the auctions started in June last year, the IMF has raised $722 million for the trust fund.

AMIN UN VISIT PLANNING

Amin will address the General Assembly and point out the "weaknesses" of President Carter and of the American UN ambassador, Andrew Young, the radio said. It said he also would condemn "British imperialism."

The British and other members of the Commonwealth managed to keep the unpredictable Ugandan leader out of England during a Commonwealth meeting there in June. They objected to his presence because of reports that Amin has ordered widespread massacres of fellow Ugandans.

This would be Amin's second visit to the United States since he seized power in a military coup in January, 1971. He addressed the General Assembly's 1975 session in his capacity as chairman of the Organization of African Unity for that year.

Churches Give To Fight Racism

GENEVA (Reuter) — The World Council of Churches (WCC) said today it will give $530,000 this year to black African liberation movements and anti-racist groups in other continents.

Five black or Indian movements in North America are among 11 groups to receive donations for the first time.

A WCC statement said the money, $30,000 less than last year, was part of its program to combat racism.

The allocation will bring the WCC's total donations to anti-racist groups since 1970 to $2,640,000. The WCC includes 300 Protestant, Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic churches representing about 400 million Christians. The council's 134-member central committee is holding its annual nine-day meeting here.

The WCC statement said the money is intended for humanitarian activities, but conceded "the grants are made without control of the manner in which they are spent."

The North American groups to receive WCC donations totalling $80,000 are Akwesasne Notes, Indigena, Institute of the Black World, National Indian Youth Council, International Indian Treaty Council, Delta Ministry, Haitian Refugee concerns, all in the United States, and the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories, in Canada.

The five African nationalist groups to receive donations are the South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO), the African National Congress (ANC) in South Africa, the Pan-Africanist Congress of Azania (South Africa), the South African Congress of Trade Unions (SACTU) and the Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) Liberation Struggle.

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

There'll be no more Saturday night specials for Joe Ng.

Ng is the slightly-built University of Victoria student who has a summer job driving a cab.

During his late-night shift last Saturday he fought off and disarmed a gun-wielding bandit and delivered him to the police station.

Today Ng was called out to the physics department at UVic (where he will be entering fourth year in the fall) to pick up an envelope that had been left for him.

Inside was $1,000 in cash.

A silver-haired lady in a straw hat left the envelope at UVic Wednesday to be given to Ng because, in her words, "he is a brave person and a decent human being."

"She wouldn't leave her name because she didn't want any publicity. She just wanted to reward Ng for his bravery, I guess," said Lorraine Charron, the secretary in the physics department who accepted the envelope.

Ng drives a cab Monday through Friday day shift, and to try and earn more money during the summer period works an extra late-night shift Saturdays.

That is, he used to. He won't be working the night shift anymore.

"I'm really pleased," he said today. "She (the donor) must be a decent citizen and a fine person."

Ng said he wants to send his gratitude to his mystery benefactor.

"She must be a person that likes law and order."

Ms. Charron said the woman was about 65 and looked "as if she had just stepped out of a rose garden."

B.C. JOBLESS DIP FORECAST

Economic Outlook Brighter for '78

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Economic conditions in all the provinces will brighten considerably in 1978 from this year's below-potential performance, the latest survey of provincial economices released today by the Conference Board in Canada indicates.

In its first look at 1978, the board, a private, non-profit research group, including business, labor and government members, predicts "an accelerated pace of economic growth for all provinces."

But it adds the national outlook for 1977 is one of below potential growth and all provinces will feel some impact of this slowdown.

In British Columbia, economic conditions are expected to stay bright for the next two years.

Growth in the forest products industry in 1977 will provide B.C. with the largest increase in real output among the provinces this year at 4.7 per cent and expansion in 1978 will be about five per cent.

B.C. is the only province which will not see an increase in its jobless rate this year and in 1978 a further decline to 8.1 per cent is anticipated.

The board says real national growth rate in production of goods and services in 1978 will be five per cent.

Unemployment should drop next year to 7.7 per cent from this year's expected average of about eight per cent and the average labor force should climb over the 10-million mark.

But the board projects a dismal performance for the rest of 1977 nationally. The greatest weakness this year was expected in agriculture and fishing sectors. Construction will barely maintain last year's levels and important mining, manufacturing and service sectors will provide little impetus to growth, it says.

"What strength there is in 1977 comes from the forestry sector which will be spurred by the booming residential construction market in U.S." Other growth is expected in the transportation, communications and utilities sectors.

In 1978, strength is expected by the board in construction, transportation, communications and utilities sectors with supportive improvement in manufacturing and services.

Agricultural output will reverse its 1977 decline and a modest advance in mining and forestry is forecast to sustain its high levels of the previous two years.

Recovery in 1978 is expected to be most pronounced in the Atlantic region after two years of weak growth.

The Employers' Council of British Columbia, meanwhile, says business conditions in B.C. are improving slightly.

The council's prognosis is based on the results of a semi-annual survey, released Wednesday, that covered 175 firms employing 183,000 people.

Council president William Hamilton said the responses of those surveyed indicate the most optimistic outlook since economic slowdown in 1975.

"It is, though, still a far cry from the 45 per cent who found conditions good in the first half of 1974, the end of the last really good period," said Hamilton. "Cautious optimism best characterizes their position."

Hamilton said survey respondents were more positive about their own industry than business in general.

Nineteen per cent rated the first half of 1977 good in their own industry while only six per cent reported business in general to be good, he said.

He said 81 per cent expect the general business climate to be good or fair during the remainder of the year, compared with 72 per cent earlier in the year.

400,000 DIE IN RADIO JOKE

GENEVA (AP) — Swiss radio apologized today for broadcasting a satirical program featuring phony news bulletins about an East-West war in which neutron bombs were dropped and 480,000 people killed. The program prompted a rash of panicky telephone calls.

Wednesday night's program followed the regular evening newscast and blended pop music with light-veined commentaries on local topics. Interspersed through much of the 50-minute Radio Cabaret broadcast were realistic sounding news flashes.

The phony news bulletins reported heavy fighting along the border between East and West Germany, then said two neutron bombs were set off. Finally, there was a regretful announcement of the death toll: "480,000 people killed but no destruction and good luck for the survivors," an editor said. "The intention was to satirize the concept of the neutron bomb as a clean bomb. We thought it would be clear to everybody that these news flashes were fiction."

The Swiss radio incident recalled the 1938 War of the Worlds broadcast in the United States by Orson Welles about a fictitious invasion of New Jersey by Martian monsters. That broadcast started panic and a mass exodus by thousands of New York area residents.

Then it compared the amount of enjoyment each pet contributed to the household, the degree of owner satisfaction, and the animal's average life span.

MPs Debate Pipeline, Gov't O.K. Monday?

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament assemble today for a two-day debate on building a northern natural gas pipeline amid signs that the government will give the go-ahead as early as Monday to an Alaska-Yukon route.

The special mid-summer sitting of the Commons is the climax of years of public argument about delivery of Arctic fuel from Alaska and northern Canada to energy-hungry markets in the United States and southern Canada.

At stake is the biggest engineering enterprise in Canadian history, a $10-billion project reaching into the 1980s with crucial implications for Canada - U.S. relations, jobs and high finance, the future of the north and the northern environment.

Advice from four separate federal inquiries published in recent weeks tends to favor a pipeline route in the early 1980s from Alaska through the southern Yukon, rather than a line along the Mackenzie River in the neighboring Northwest Territories, with a possible link later to transport natural gas from the Mackenzie Delta to southern markets.

Deadline for decision is Sept. 1, when U.S. President Jimmy Carter is committed to make a firm recommendation to Congress. Alternative to an overland delivery route through Canada is a rival U.S. proposal to liquefy the gas in Alaska and deliver it to the U.S. West Coast by ship.

But Canadian government sources said Wednesday the cabinet plans to meet all weekend and make its decision Monday.

A Liberal caucus informant said that opposition support this week for an Alaska-Yukon pipeline, despite some qualifications, clinches expected approval for that route from the cabinet.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark announced Wednesday that his Progressive Conservative party caucus agrees with an Alaska-Yukon route. Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, announced his party's support earlier.

The special Commons debate, and the weekend cabinet discussion, thus promised to centre on matters of detail such as timing, finance, routes and conditions.

The government has promised that its final decision and attached conditions will be put to Parliament this fall for ratification as legislation.

The conditions will be important politically, because there are wide differences about details.

Criminal Injuries Hit Home

VANCOUVER (CP) — The most dangerous places in British Columbia during June apparently were private homes, if the criminal injuries awards for that month is any indication.

The Workers' Compensation Board granted 52 awards totalling $187,822 and two pensions totalling $490 a month for injuries resulting from criminal attacks.

Of the attacks, 10 were in the victim's home or a house where he was visiting.

A pension of $390 a month and $354 in a lump sum were awarded to the wife and two children of a 28-year-old man from a coastal community who was shot to death by another man for no apparent reason.

A supplementary pension of $100 and an addditional lump sum of $5,782 were given to a 19-year-old man who became a quadriplegic as a result of injuries. He had fallen down a stairwell when attacked by another man. The largest lump sum award in June — $20,260 — was given to a 58-year-old Vancouver man for permanent injuries to his left leg he received when he attempted to stop two youths he saw running away from a stolen car.

Heroin Plan Political—NDP

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke said Wednesday he doubts whether the provincial government's new multi-million dollar heroin treatment program will ever get off the ground.

Reacting to an announcement by Health Minister Bob McClelland earlier in the day, Cocke said: "I don't think it'll ever be tried out."

Cocke questioned the lack of specifics in McClelland's program and the fact that the start-up date is vague — being given as only some time before Dec. 1978.

"It's a political announcement at this point," said Cocke. "There's nothing definite to it — it's a press conference and a press release, that's all."

Cocke said heroin addiction is "an agonizing problem and it isn't to be solved by political games."

Cocke also said that compulsory incarceration will not be a remedy to the problem, that such a program has never worked in other parts of the world and there is no reason it would work here.

The NDP proposed earlier this year that a heroin maintenance program be established to help combat the problem.

Dr. Scott Wallace, Progressive Conservative Party leader, said in an interview that he agreed in principle with the government proposal but has reservations about its operation.

Wallace said the program could be dangerous in application because "this government hasn't been outstanding in understanding problems of young people."

He said strong safeguards are needed to ensure the program won't be abused and that decisions made to hold someone for treatment are regularly reviewed.

Wallace said the matter raised questions of individual freedom and that it shouldn't be treated with anything but studied caution by the government.

Store's Penalty $50,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has ordered a Winnipeg-based department store chain to pay $50,000 compensation for serious violations of the labor code.

In a decision released Wednesday, the board ordered the Robinson Little chain to compensate the Retail Clerks Union for all expenses incurred during the union's organizing drive at the chain's Kamloops branch.

The decision was the board's first use of the "make whole" clause of the provincial labor code.

The chain also was ordered to compensate eight workers who lost their jobs in the dispute and reimburse the attorney-general's department for legal costs arising out a constitutional challenge the chain launched against the legality of the code.

Robinson Little dropped its legal challenge last month and the money now has been paid.

The union appealed to the board after Robinson Little closed its Kamloops operation Sept. 2, 1975.

The board noted that the chain still operates elsewhere in the province and found the company guilty of failing to bargain in good faith, of refusing to employ or continue to employ persons because they belonged to a trade union and of conducting an illegal lockout.

Gas Fumes

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A 500-foot high cloud of white gas covered part of the city today following an acid spill at the plant of Canadian Industries Ltd.

Homes near the plant were evacuated and motorists driving through the southern end of the city were forced to switch on headlights.

Wallace to Test His Own Conduct in Court

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said Wednesday he will take himself to court to get a judgment on whether he illegally received public funds in 1976.

Wallace interrupted the afternoon sitting of the legislature to tell the house that last year the government paid him nearly $200 to cover expenses while a member of the steering committee of the B.C. Conference on the Family.

Wallace said the payments had just come to his attention and his lawyer, Hugh Ladner, of Kelowna, will start action within days to seek a declatory judgment from the B.C. Supreme Court.

Wallace could be found to be in breach of the Constitution Act which forbids any MLA from receiving public funds while performing a public duty.

The act provides for fines up to $500 and can force an MLA to relinquish his seat.

On July 11 Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) charged that Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt and George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) had illegally accepted public funds to cover their expenses while serving on a housing committee.

A special committee was struck last week to look into the charges but has been stalled by a threatened boycott of hearings by the opposition members.

The two NPD members, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Wallace have said they want no part of the proceedings because the outcome is weighted in the government's favor. There are seven Social Credit members on the 11-man committee.

Wallace said he is initiating the court action in his own case because he wants an objective judgment — free from allegations of political bias.

"Whatever decision is rendered I want it to be from outside the political arena," said Wallace at a news conference.

"I want a decision and I want it to be believable."

But whether the court will judge Wallace's case, is a matter of conjecture.

The government opted to set up a committee to investigate the housing committee charges only after Attorney-General Garde Gardom told the house the issue—because of precedent and tradition — must be dealt with by the legislature.

Wallace told the legislature he is uncertain as to whether he ever actually committed any wrong-doing, but because

Free Show Packs Them In

It just may be the best free show in town.

They are pouring into the Provincial Museum these days, more than 10,000 of them one day earlier this month, more than half a million so far this year, better than 110,000 ahead of last year.

What they find there has them staring. It may be the relief map just inside the door, the one with wrinkled mountains. It gives the view from Olympus of the Pacific Northwest.

That boney fellow who appears to have rested too long on that stump? He's to be found in the natural history gallery. You can't get much more natural than that.

JAMES BAY, FAIRFIELD

Branch Libraries Wanted

Instead of committing themselves to more than $400,000 a year in leasing space for a new central library from the provincial government, the four core municipalities should consider building more community-size branch libraries, Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie suggested today.

McKenzie said if there were branches in such communities as James Bay and Fairfield there would be less pressure on the present central library building.

He also said that new technology in the library field, particularly microfilm techniques and computer hook-ups with other, large reference libraries, should be explored to ensure the most efficient use of the present building.

McKenzie's comments at the city finance committee meeting were prompted by a revised proposal from the Greater Victoria Library Board, for leasing space in the new provincial government building under construction at Blanshard and Broughton.

The committee referred the matter for a council-in-committee discussion at next Thursday's regular council meeting.

An earlier GVLB proposal for relocating the central library in the Blanshard-Broughton building was supported by Victoria but rejected by the other three municipal councils.

Its financial terms were less favorable to the municipalities than the present proposal, but McKenzie complained today that city council was rushed into endorsing "this terrific bargain" by a provincially-imposed deadline.

A library board delegation will be invited to address council on the matter next week, and McKenzie indicated he would have a list of questions to put to him.

Aldermen also asked the city comptroller to provide back-up financial data so that the city's present share of library costs can be compared with the operating costs involved in the relocation scheme.

Victoria's representative on the library board and a strong advocate of relocation, Ald. Murray Glazier, was absent on holiday today.

Of the other two aldermen present, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Frank Carson, only Tindall gave any hint that he might be reconsidering his earlier support for the idea.

"I think Ald. McKenzie has raised some valid points here," he said, "and I'm not suggesting that in itself is unusual."

Girl Charged

Victoria police had little trouble making an arrest in an early morning break-in at a downtown restaurant.

A tipster reported to police at 2:40 a.m. there was suspicious movement inside the Shah Jahan restaurant, 1010 Fort.

Seven officers sped to the scene and were taking positions around the building when a suspect came out a door.

A police spokesman said a 17-year-old girl was arrested and charged with breaking and entering with intent. She is to appear in court later.

About $8 was taken from the restaurant and the money was recovered, the spokesman said.

Bear Hill Park Closed

A high fire hazard prompted closure today of Bear Hill Park by the Capital Regional District, which is monitoring all 10 regional parks closely in the current heat wave.

Next to close could be East Sooke Park, the largest of the area's regional parks and most vulnerable to fire because of restricted access and water supply.

Bear Hill, on the Saanich-Central Saanich boundary, was first to close because it has no vehicular access for firefighting equipment and is bordered by residential property.

Parks supervisor Jack Kanhoffen said the public had been careful so far in the season and no fires have been reported in regional parks. But with each dry day the risk becomes greater and it is in the public interest to take the further step of closure where the hazard is greatest.

He said the Mt. Work area in Durrance Lake Park also is being considered as a closed area. There has already been a fire on nearby private property, Kanhoffen said.

Special Squad Eyed To Fight Arsonists

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons is considering forming a special squad to fight a surge in arson fires in the past two years.

In an interview today, Simmons said the problem is large enough now to warrant establishing a permanent and full-time arson squad comprised initially of one police officer and one fire prevention officer.

He said the proposal, which he described at this stage as "just a germ of an idea" won't be made to Victoria council until budget discussions in February.

He said it would be impossible to implement without more staff. And that would mean an increase in budget.

He estimated such a squad would cost around $50,000 a year taking into account wages, office space, photo supplies and other equipment and materials needed to carry out investigations.

Although the fire department has arson investigators, the four inspectors involved have many other duties and the pressures often relegate arson investigation into a secondary role.

Simmons said, however, fire statistics in recent years indicate arson should have a higher priority and full-time attention.

He said last year arson fires caused more damage than all other fires combined — $626,000 out of $1,172,744.

There were 32 arson fires during the year, more than double the previous year's 13.

This year the number is expected to be higher. Already to the end of July there have been 23 arson fires in the city with losses totalling $253,475.

The increase isn't restricted to Victoria. Simmons said arson is a problem across the country.

"It's a form of violence we're going through right now along with all the other kinds of violence in the world."

He did not feel paid arson occurred often here although it is a major problem in large U.S. cities.

Most of the local arson is "pure vandalism," he said.

"How do you explain a person wandering down the street and setting fires to cars as we had here a short time ago?" the chief asked. "Such a person has got to be mentally upset. It would take a psychiatrist to decide the motive."

Help Asked in Rapist Hunt

Colwood RCMP have appealed for help in a two-month-old rape case, details of which have only now been made public.

An RCMP spokesman said the suspect — he is about six feet tall, 25 years old, with shoulder-length blonde hair and is wanted in connection with the rape of a 29-year-old Langford woman in Metchosin June 17.

The woman had been hitch-hiking with her two children, a girl, aged three and a boy five, on Goldstream Avenue and was picked up shortly after midnight by the suspect driving a white van.

The suspect introduced himself as "Jim."

Police said the man took the woman to a deserted road in Metchosin and threatened he would harm the woman's children if she didn't obey him.

The boy escaped and ran to a nearby house and woke up the resident.

The resident returned with the boy in time to see the van drive off.

Police did not reveal the incident beause, the spokesman said, investigators thought they had a lead on the van and felt, if the suspect knew, he might flee.

The leads, however, failed to produce either the suspect or the van, which is described as an early 60s model Ford Econoline or similar GM Dodge product.

Anyone with information about the suspect or vehicle is asked to contact Colwood RCMP at 388-3123.

PAYING PRICE for scoring second goal of game Victoria's Charn Dhillon (9), who is slammed into Coquitlam goalkeeper Greg Thomas (1) by Frank Nielsen (17) after getting shot away. Dhillon's tally helped Shamrocks trim Adanacs 17-7 in opening game of best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association semi-final series Wednesday night at Memorial Arena. (Irving Strickland photo)

Ivan Thompson scored a magnificient six goals as Victoria Shamrocks gave Coquitlam Adanacs a playing lesson Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association semi-final playoff series at Memorial Arena.

And the reaction of the rival coaches to the Shamrocks' 17-7 victory was predictable.

Coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks said it was a culmination of hard work and a continuation of the fine defence the team had been playing for the past three weeks.

"The defence was superb," he said. "Thompson just had an outstanding game. Chris Hall was tremendous when we were shorthanded, and Larry Smeltzer was just great."

Those are the Rocks Dillon singled out for special attention, but he also praised the club for "a fine team effort."

Bob Salt of Coquitlam naturally was disappointed.

"We had our chances early," he said. "But we couldn't score. We had three or four excellent chances in the first few minutes and if we had scored then it might have made a difference. But we didn't.

"Thompson played well," he added, "and so did Smeltzer. He kept them in the game early."

Then he cautioned: "but, we'll be back."

For Thompson, it was a personal playoff best, and the best for a Shamrock since Larry Booth twice turned in a six-goal trick several years ago.

It was Thompson's finest hour, coming as it did in the playoffs. But he had served notice earlier he was ready. He scored five goals and had four assists against Burrards here last week and he duplicated that performance against Nanaimo on Saturday, giving him a total of 26 points in his last three games.

Two of his goals came with the Shamrocks short-handed. Two were within 39 seconds of one another at the end of the second period to give the Irish an 11-3 lead at the time.

The Rocks led 4-1 after one period and it was Thompson's first short-handed goal that got them started. His four goals in the second period equalled a WLA record.

Smeltzer earned his moments of glory when he stopped the Adanacs cold for 27 minutes and 45 seconds after Randy Bryan had opened the scoring for the visitors at 3:19 of the first period. It wasn't until 11:04 of the second when Mark Valastin, the pick the Adanacs, beat him again.

Hall came back into his own with a stellar defensive performance and scored two goals and had three assists.

Norm Baker also scored a pair as did Dan Green while singles went to Charn Dhillon, Dave Lowden, Terry Sanderson, Dave Thomson and Ron MacNeil.

Larry Bell had four assists.

Dillon said "it will be tougher in Coquitlam Saturday. They play more agressively at home." And that seemed strange as the Adanacs were far more agressive in this game than the Irish.

But the Shamrocks had the tighter defence. And this is part of the Dillon master plan.

"Last year, I figured we went a little stale in the playoffs," Dillon said. "So, this year I didn't push them as hard early. But I really started to push in the last month and I think we are in fine shape.

"I have only one thing in mind," he added. "That's getting to the Mann Cup. And we practice Friday."

. . . About Major Hike And Willie 'The Shoe'

It was sort of a busman's holiday in a way — there had to be a stop-off at Exhibition Park, a chance visit to Longacres and, naturally, another look at the Kingdome and Seattle's contribution to the American Baseball League — the Mariners.

But first things first, and the couple in the ferry line about three weeks ago, was George and Nonie Harknett, who otherwise may be recalled by the racing set as owners of the four-year-old filly Major Hike.

The reason was the Cover Girl Stakes at Ex-Park and Major Hike was about to do what she hadn't been able to do all of last year — beat her old nemesis, Title Victory. The Harknetts were en route to see the job done.

And it was a first for several reasons.

It was the first Ex-Park Stakes win for the Harknetts, the first for apprentice jockey Dale Manning, and the first for Victoria trainer Wayne Isbister. Last fall, Major Hike won at Sandown and before that, in other years, George had won feature events on the Island. But a stakes win at Vancouver — that was the ultimate.

Actually, it was all part of the Harknett plan. George had mapped out the strategy after last fall's Sandown meet and hadn't put Major Hike in training until March.

There had been two allowance victories earlier and then the charge from behind to overtake Title Victory in the run to the wire and win by a length and a little.

Naturally, there is more ahead.

Major Hike was purchased from Jack Diamond in the spring of last year for $6,000 and has been money in the bank ever since.

Then, of course, there was the appearance at Ex-Park the very next week of that marvellous little man, Willie Shoemaker.

All 98 pounds and size one and one-half shoes, Shoemaker came north from Hollywood Park to ride a pair of winners and give Ex-Park a Monday night million-dollar handle which was about $369,634 more than passed through the mutuels the corresponding night a year earlier.

The fans were lined up six deep along the rail to get a look at their hero for the night, the winner of more races than any other rider and with nobody close to usurping that honor in the immediate future.

Shoemaker broke his maiden at Golden Gate Fields in 1949 and since then has taken out of racing 10 per cent of the $69 million in purses he's won. Now he's putting something back in the game.

The week before appearing at Ex-Park he rode at Rockingham Park during an off-day from Hollywood and the play was up by 44 per cent.

That's what the magic of his name does for the sport. And, the day after being in Vancouver, the "Shoe" was due to ride an elephant in a charity parade in Los Angeles. There is no record how he made out in that challenge. But no matter, when he romped down in front on River of Ice and Halfers at Ex-Park that made it victories No. 7,251 and 7,252 and he hasn't stopped since.

It was a pleasure to agree at the mutuels.

Longacres was just a passing fancy, thank goodness, and the Kingdome is all it was expected to be even if the Mariners aren't exactly the scourge of the league.

Their biggest trouble is that they win more on the road than they do at home.

The big story back then was that the Mariners had moved out of the cellar to allow Oakland in and a sweep over the Angels would have moved them up one niche higher.

It didn't happen. But then they weren't the only losers that day as the Angels swept a pair and then the series the following night.

I missed a new truck by one seat in the between-games draw. So what's $4,000 compared to a baseball game?

PRONOVOST TO COACH SABRES

Rene Marcel Pronovost, veteran of the National Hockey League for 21 years, was named Wednesday as head coach of the Buffalo Sabres.

He is the fourth head coach in the seven-year history of the club.

Two other NHL coaches are expected to be named today.

Ron Stewart is reported ready to pick up the reins of the Los Angeles Kings and former defenceman Leo Boivin was named as the most likely candidate to coach St. Louis Blues.

Richest Bonspiel

EDMONTON (CP) — The richest bonspiel in curling history, the $50,000 World Open Tournament of Champions, will be staged here Oct. 20-25.

A news conference was told Wednesday that several European teams, including world champion Ragnar Kamp of Sweden, are expected to attend.

Lions in Front

CALGARY (CP) — British Columbia Lions move into first place in Western Football Conference standings after defeating Calgary Stampeders 30-26 in last-minute heroics Wednesday night.

The Lions were behind 23-26 with less than three minutes remaining when quarterback Jerry Tagge marched 83 yards in 11 plays to obtain their third victory in four starts.

The winning touchdown, at 14:42 of the fourth quarter, came from a 19-yard pass from Tagge to Al Charuk.

Willie Burden scored three touchdowns for the Stampeders. His third touchdown, a three-yard run at 12:14 of the last quarter, gave Calgary a short-lived 24-23 lead. It was followed by a two-point conversion on a pass from quarterback John Hufnagel to Rudy Linterman.

"I thought we had it," Calgary coach Jack Gotta said referring to Calgary's brief moment of glory and the excitement of 25,568 fans.

It was the second regular-season meeting between the two WFC clubs. British Columbia won the first game 14-9 in Vancouver July 2.

The win gave the Lions a 3-1 record. Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers are tied at second place, each with two wins and a loss. Calgary and Saskatchewan Roughriders have identical 1-3 records.

Lui Passaglia contributed 12 points to the Lions, kicking field goals of 39, 34 and 14 yards and adding three converts.

Mike Strickland on a 13-yard run and Jimmy Young on an 11-yard pass from Tagge completed the Lions' scoring.

Burden's two earlier touchdowns came on a 38-yard pass-andrun combination and a seven-yard pass from Hufnagel.

Cyril McFall booted two converts and two singles. Calgary also got two points on safety touch in the third quarter. The Lions had started deep in its end and Tagge had attempted to evade Calgary's defensive end John Helton as he unloaded—and was ruled for intentionally grounding the ball.

Calgary's two fumbles in the first half proved costly.

Toward the end of the first quarter, Calgary backs Robin Harber and Scott Crawford collided with each other on a Passaglia punt and the ball was recovered by B.C. at the Calgary 41. That fumble recovery led to Strickland's touchdown early in the second quarter.

After Strickland's touchdown, Calgary marched down the field but former Lion Lou Harris fumbled at the B.C. 32 and Grady Cavness recovered. Five plays later, Tagge tossed to Young for the Lions' second touchdown.

B.C.'s final touchdown was set up after Rockly Long ran 35 yards to return Linterman's 73-yard kickoff. Tagge then used a series of short passes to Terry Bailey, Charuk, Young and Richard Appleby before hitting Charuk with the winner.

Statistically the Stampeders outdid the Lions. The Stampeders had 432 yards of net offence, 72 of them on the ground. The Lions had 259 yards of net offenee, 77 of them by rushing.

Tagge was good on 20 of 30 strikes with Charuk making 59 yards on five catches. Appleby was second with 49 yards on three receptions. Strickland was B.C.'s top ground gainer with 66 yards on 18 carries.

Riders' Razzle Dazzles Argos

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders served notice Wednesday night that they don't intend to relinquish the Grey Cup easily as they rolled over Toronto Argonauts 41-11 in an Eastern Football Conference game.

And all it took was fundamental football, head coach George Brancato said. "We didn't do anything new except block and tackle."

The usually conservative Riders also used some razzle-dazzle on the Argos, including four short kickoffs in the first quarter, as they rolled to a 28-0 lead with four consecutive touchdowns.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill said the short kickoffs startled the Argos. "We were 21 points down before we knew we were in a football game."

But the Argos, who surprised the Riders 17-1 in Toronto last week, will be back, Cahill said over his shoulder as he bolted from an interview room. "And Brancato better know it."

The loss last week ignited harsh words from Ottawa management and fans, and several lineup changes were made in hopes of stirring up the defending Grey Cup champs.

Brancato said he yelled and screamed all week in practice. "Maybe that helped."

Quarterback Tom Clements, who threw three touchdown passes and handed off for two more major scores, said the improved Rider performance was the result of adjusting for the strong Toronto defensive blitz.

Picken Produces Surprise

Vancouver's 10th seeded John Picken pulled a surprise win over fourth-seeded former Victorian Don McCormick of Vancouver 6-7, 7-5, 6-3. Toronto's Dave Brown defeated Mike Puc of London, Ont., 6-2, 6-2, and in a marathon three-hour set, Toronto's Dale Power beat Montreal's Francois Synaeghel 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

On the women's side, top-seeded Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa beat Toronto's Sally Coles 6-2, 7-5 in the second round of singles play.

How Good Is Peter Szmidt?

MONTREAL (CP) — The sky may be the limit for 15-year-old Peter Szmidt, even if he still surprises himself by what he does in a swimming pool.

Szmidt thrilled the crowd at the Canadian swimming championships Wednesday night by winning the 400-metre freestyle final in Canadian record time of three minutes, 5.585 seconds, erasing the old mark of 4:00.14 held by Stephen Badger of Winnipeg.

"My coach (Dave Johnson) told me that's what I had to do, but I didn't think I could do it," the Pointe Claire, Que., teenager said. "I'm just so surprised I don't know what to say."

Not only did Szmidt win, but he did it the hard way. He was seventh after the first 50 metres, but closed the gap relentlessly and pulled alongside the leader—American Olympic star Mike Bruner—midway through the final lap of the Olympic Pool.

Szmidt, a strapping six-footer, just touched first while Bruner—gold medallist in the 200-metre butterfly at the Olympics last year—came in second in 3:58.63.

"I didn't think I could come back from seventh," the Pointe Claire swimmer said. "And I didn't think I could catch him (Bruner)."

Johnson, however, was more generous in evaluating his protegee's talent.

"He's a very modest person," Johnson said. "It's just a question of time before he is down around world record time."

"There was a day when a Canadian male swimmer wouldn't want to race against a guy like Bruner. But we've got guys like Szmidt coming up who are going to be in line for gold at Moscow."

The only other Canadian record Wednesday was set by Steve Pickell, 20, of Vancouver who took the men's 100-metre backstroke in 57.36 to better his old mark of 57.58. The Vancouver swimmer's time was also the fastest in the world this year.

Graham Smith, 19, of Edmonton also recorded the fastest time in the world this year for the 200-metre breaststroke — 2:20.35—but his winning effort was shy of his own Canadian record of 2:19.42.

Other individual winners Wednesday included Shannon Smith, 15, of New Westminster, B.C., who won the women's 400 freestyle in 4:15.81 and Cheryl Gibson, 18, of Edmonton, who took the women's 100-metre backstroke in 1:04.22.

Christine Hodson, 15, of Ottawa took the measure of a slow field in the women's 200 breaststroke, winning in 2:40.42.

The Olympium Club of Etobicoke in Toronto won the women's 800-metre freestyle relay in 8:28.45 while the Canadian Dolphins of Vancouver took the men's 800 relay in Canadian record time of 7:45.11, bettering their own mark of 7:46.72.

Meanwhile, association officials have unveiled a plan to divide the national team into men's and women's units, each with its own head coach, in time for next year's Commonwealth Games in Edmonton and world championships in Berlin.

Masses Grieve For Makarios

NICOSIA (Reuter) — Thousands of Greek-Cypriot mourners, including small children, lined up for hours to kiss the hand and robe of the late Archbishop Makarios as he lay in state Wednesday in Nicosia's historic Cathedral of St. John.

In a massive display of grief, patient crowds filed silently past the open coffin of the first president of Cyprus as it lay beneath a vaulted roof hung with chandeliers, facing an ornate gold altar covered with icons.

Watched by a few policemen, the mourners crossed themselves and bent in farewell tribute before the familiar bearded figure of the late head of the Greek Orthodox Church in Cyprus. A black-robed priest read prayers from the altar.

Acting President Spyros Kyprianou told the country in a radio broadcast Wednesday night that the death of Makarios on Wednesday of a heart attack was "a blow of tremendous dimensions."

"We have a duty to follow in his footsteps and to continue the struggle for the survival of our country," he said.

Many people were shocked at the death of the president, having been lulled into believing that his return to work so soon after a heart attack in April indicated a complete recovery.

"My first reaction was to cry," said one Greek-Cypriot man. "I couldn't believe it."

A state funeral will be held here Monday and the archbishop will be buried at Kykkos Monastery in the mountains of southwest Cyprus, which he entered as a novice in the 1930s.

The charismatic religious and political leader, so familiar on the world stage with his greyflecked beard, black robe, chain and tall black ecclesiastical hat, will be difficult to replace.

Kyprianou, 44, will fulfill the late archbishop's secular role until elections are held.

But Kyprianou, a former foreign minister, only recently left the hospital himself after unspecified treatment and suffered a heart attack in 1969.

Under the constitution he will act as president for 45 days. He can remain in office longer, until new elections are held, if the Council of Ministers and the House of Representatives approves.

The cabinet meets today to decide whether Kyprianou should serve until February, when Makarios' term in office was due to end.

The Holy Synod of the autonomous Greek Orthodox Church of Cyprus met Wednesday to consider choosing a successor.

Canadians Sell 3 Whales To U.S. Navy for Research

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The U.S. Navy has purchased three Beluga whales for use in military experiments at a navy research laboratory in San Diego, Calif.

The white whales, native to the Arctic Ocean and Hudson Bay, were collected by Nanuk Enterprises of Churchill.

Clark Bowers, a civilian biological technician working with the navy's scientific team, said the Belugas have a "unique diving physiology" which the navy wants to study.

It is the first time the navy has collected the large mammal which belongs to the same family as the dolphin and porpoise.

The three white whales are being held in tanks in Churchill and will be flown to the Naval Ocean System Centre in San Diego on Friday.

"We will explore the Beluga's hearing, sonar and diving capabilities," said Bowers. "Through these experiments we hope to improve diving gear and sonar."

John Hicks, a spokesman for Nanuk, said he will be collecting two more whales this month for the Minnesota Zoological Society.

Plenty Of Fruit In Okanagan

PENTICTON (CP) — The projected 11-per-cent increase in the Okanagan peach crop will offset losses due to the hailstorm last week that damaged 10 per cent of the total crop, Nigel Taylor, president of British Columbia Tree Fruits Ltd., said Wednesday.

"The crop will be at least equal to that of last year and no shortages are anticipated," Taylor said in a news release.

"There is every reason for confidence in a continuing supply of fruit."

He said the plum crop was damaged and would be lower than average, but pears, apples and grapes should be normal.

During a period of five minutes the storm dropped hailstones as large as ping pong balls, damaging about 2,000 acres of orchard land in the Oliver area south of here. About half the crops affected were not covered by insurance.

Most of the apricot crop already had been harvested.

DOPER CANDY OFF MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Candy in plastic containers that look like hypodermic needles was pulled off the Canadian market Wednesday after tests by the federal health department found that it contains an illegal dye.

"The dye has to be harmful to people or it would be permitted," Nes Lubinsky, the department's public relations officer for Ontario, said in a telephone interview.

Tests completed Wednesday found the candy contains Ponceau 4R, an illegal dye similar to Red Dye No. 4, a suspected cancer-causing agent.

"The importer, Triple C Importers Ltd. of Hamilton, has been informed of this and has initiated voluntary recall of the product," Lubinsky said.

The company also has offices in Alberta and B.C and the product may have been distributed there as well as in Ontario. The candy has been on the Canadian market for about two weeks.

About 100 cases of the product had been imported from Holland, Lubinsky said.

CNTU Flatly Vetoes Voluntary Restraints

By DON BRAID
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Leaders of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions have flately rejected the federal government's proposal that unions exercise voluntary restraint in wage demands in return for an early end to wage and price controls.

After a 1½-hour meeting with cabinet ministers Wednesday president Andre L'Heureaux said the leaders insisted on an immediate end to controls on wages.

But they refused to consider voluntary restraints once controls are lifted, while pressing the government to keep some control over price increases.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald played down the differences at the meeting, but added, "it would be misleading to say there isn't quite a variety of opinion among the participants."

He attended the meeting with Labor Minister John Munro and Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien.

Macdonald also raised the possibility that controls will continue longer than the government wants if business and labor don't agree to restraints.

The unions are "still pressing pretty hard for the removal of controls, but I think they now understand there's a possibility controls may come off sooner if there's a chance of setting up restraints in the post-control period, than if nothing happens," he said.

By law, the government can keep controls in force until Dec. 31, 1978. Last Friday Macdonald proposed three dates for ending the system early: Oct. 14, the second anniversary of the anti-inflation program; Jan. 2, 1978; or Oct. 14, 1978.

After a lengthy meeting with labor and business leaders last Friday, Prime Minister Trudeau outlined three conditons for an early end to controls:

—A pledge from business and labor to follow voluntary restraints.

—Their agreement to participate in a consultative forum, along with government and consumer groups.

—Establishing an agency to monitor pay and price increases, and giving it power to investigate exceptional increases.

The CNT apparently is willing to consider the forum and agency recommendations, but only if the government agrees to abandon wage controls and forget the principle of restraint.

S. Koreans Stole U.S. Army Supplies

NEW YORK (AP) — Up to $17 million a year in food, uniforms and other supplies was stolen from the U.S. Army by South Koreans who exploited the U.S. government's computer system, says a retired army officer, who adds that the operation is continuing.

The New York Times says Lindsay Baird, who served as a provost marshal in Korea and on a squad which looked into theft and corruption there, gave detailed charges of an extensive Korean crime network to the staff of the Senate's governmental operations committee.

Baird, a retired lieutenant-colonel, said in his letter to the committee and in an interview with The Times that the operation began in the early 1970s and continues "at the same or slightly reduced level."

He said the army's logistics system was used to move about and store at convenient locations items the Koreans had decided to steal. Once such property was stolen, all records of its existence disappeared.

Food was stolen every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and in one case $103,000 worth of field uniforms was diverted.

An army spokesman in Washington said he is awaiting information from Korea about any investigations conducted in the early 1970s.

The spokesman said there are no records on file in Washington of any such investigation, although the results of investigations in the field might not be available there.

A spokesman for the Korean embassy in Washington said the allegations are "malicious lies not worthy of further comment."

New Projects For Blanshard

Two new developments along the west side of Blanshard north of Hillside — one already well on the way to completion, the other about to begin — will alter the landscape on a hitherto undeveloped section of the arterial road.

Under construction on the block bounded by Market, Blanshard, Hillside and Nanaimo is a commercial-residential project with total floor space of 77,560 square feet, including a bank and retail stores on the ground floor and 87 apartments (75 one-bedroom, 12 two-bedroom).

The development is governed by a land-use contract and construction is expected to be completed by the end of the year. Architect for the project is John Di Castri.

Further north, on property at Blanshard-Topaz-Nanaimo, Foreman Enterprises Ltd. proposes to build new headquarters for the RCMP.

Two buildings, one two storeys, the other three storeys, will provide a total of more than 71,000 square feet.

A land-use contract was approved a few months ago but the developers then applied for an extension of the contract's registration date.

However, a city spokesman said today that all formalities have now been completed and a building permit is ready for issuance. Meanwhile, excavation on the site has already started.

AMIN PLANNING UN VISIT

NAIROBI (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin will attend next month's session of the UN General Assembly in New York, the official Uganda radio announced today.

Amin will address the General Assembly and point out the "weaknesses" of President Carter and of the American UN ambassador, Andrew Young, the radio said. It said he also would condemn "British imperialism."

The British and other members of the Commonwealth managed to keep the unpredictable Ugandan leader out of England during a Commonwealth meeting there in June. They objected to his presence because of reports that Amin has ordered widespread massacres of fellow Ugandans.

This would be Amin's second visit to the United States since he seized power in a military coup in January, 1971. He addressed the General Assembly's 1975 session in his capacity as chairman of the Organization of African Unity for that year.

PRISONER SKIPS FROM HOSPITAL

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — A Washington state penitentiary prisoner using crutches to walk following hip surgery escaped from St. Mary's Hospital here, a prison spokesman said.

A witness saw Dennis Matter, 30, stow his crutches and leave the hospital with a woman driving a blue auto with Oregon licence plates, said spokesman A. J. Murphy.

Murphy said Matter had not been under constant surveillance. He said a hospital doctor had recently indicated Matter was not well enough to be transferred back to more limited care at the prison hospital.

IMF Raises $55M

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The International Monetary Fund (IMF) raised $55 million Wednesday in the 12th of its series of gold auctions to finance a special trust fund for the world's poorest countries. Since the auctions started in June last year, the IMF has raised $722 million for the trust fund.

Churches Give To Fight Racism

GENEVA (Reuter) — The World Council of Churches (WCC) said today it will give $530,000 this year to black African liberation movements and anti-racist groups in other continents.

Five black or Indian movements in North America are among 11 groups to receive donations for the first time.

A WCC statement said the money, $30,000 less than last year, was part of its program to combat racism.

Five black nationalist groups in southern Africa will get a total of $265,000.

The allocation will bring the WCC's total donations to anti-racist groups since 1970 to $2,640,000. The WCC includes 300 Protestant, Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic churches representing about 400 million Christians. The council's 134-member central committee is holding its annual nine-day meeting here.

The WCC statement said the money is intended for humanitarian activities, but conceded "the grants are made without control of the manner in which they are spent."

The North American groups to receive WCC donations totalling $80,000 are Akwesasne Notes, Indigena, Institute of the Black World, National Indian Youth Council, International Indian Treaty Council, Delta Ministry, Haitian Refugee concerns, all in the United States, and the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories, in Canada.

The five African nationalist groups to receive donations are the South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO), the African National Congress (ANC) in South Africa, the Pan-Africanist Congress of Azania (South Africa), the South African Congress of Trade Unions (SACTU) and the Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) Liberation Struggle.
